Mrs. Meir denounces camp move

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Premier Golda Meir said today the Austrian decision to close the Schoenau transit camp for Soviet Jews was "a great victory" for Arab terrorism. She appealed to the Austrian government to reconsider.

Mrs. Meir discarded the speech she had prepared for the parliamentary assembly of the Council of Europe and spoke almost exclusively of the dangers of Austria's "surrender to terrorism."

Mrs. Meir is flying to Vienna tonight to appeal personally to Chancellor Bruno Kreisky to retract his promise to Arab terrorists to shut down the Schoenau transit camp for Soviet Jews emigrating to Israel, reliable sources in Tel Aviv reported.

Mrs. Meir said the Austrian government's decision "will be regarded as a great victory throughout the terrorist organizations and the radio stations of the Arab world —and rightly so, because this is the first time a government has come to an agreement of this sort.

"Until now ... terrorists often found themselves free to go through the same operation all over again, but now something much more has happened. The very principle of the freedom of movement of people has been put under a question mark.

"The four hostages taken in Vienna are alive and free, but I am convinced that —without this being the intention of the Austrian government and its prime minister —what has happened in Vienna is the greatest encouragement to terror throughout the world."

Mrs. Meir delivered her impromptu speech without notes, telling the members of the parliaments of the 17 nations in the Council of Europe:

I wrote a speech, but I decided at the last moment not to place between you and me the paper on which that speech was written, especially in view of what happened in Vienna a few days ago. Actually, what happened in Vienna highlights the position of the Jewish people and the position of Israel among its neighbors."

She appealed to the European parliamentarians to help her win a reversal of the Austrian decision, adding:

"I bring you a problem. If you wish, you can say, 'It is not ours.' But forgive me for saying that there is no such thing in the world any more where the problem of one people can be exclusively the problem of that people."

In Beirut, Lebanon, the Palestinian guerrilla group that carried out the Austrian operation threatened terror reprisals against Austrians if the Vienna government goes back on its pledge to shut down the camp.

A statement from the Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution published in the proguerrilla Lebanese newspaper Al Moharrer said:

"Any backing down on the Austrian government pledge would not serve the interests and stability of Austria or the safety of its citizens."

The three Soviet Jews kidnaped by the terrorists Friday to win Kreisky's pledge arrived in Israel, meanwhile, to an emotional welcome from relatives and officials of the Jewish Agency.

"I am very pleased to be with you in our beloved country," said Moshe Litvak, a 71-year-old pensioner who was held hostage 15 hours. "We had a very hard journey and I am very tired."

Litvak, his wife Barisha and the third hostage, David Czaplik, 26, were among a large group of immigrants arriving in Tel Aviv from Vienna.

About 2,650 immigrating Soviet Jews a month have been passing through the Schoenau camp 70 miles south of Vienna in the two years since the Soviet Union relaxed emigration restrictions.

Reports from Vienna said the flow was continuing.

Allenton may be exhausting survival odds

ALLENTON, Wis. (AP) — Many residents of this railroad town preferred to be elsewhere Sunday while firefighters dampened the fuse to a fuel tank which Allen Konrath says could wipe out half the community.

Konrath, fire chief for the hamlet of 650 persons, said Allenton feels as though it is exhausting its survival odds during bouts with train derailments and fluid explosives.

The town, staddling a Soo Line roadbed, was evacuated in 1969 when several tank cars containing liquid petroleum gas derailed. One exploded, but the blast force was vertical, sending flames 425 feet skyward without damaging the community, he said.

Sunday, about two blocks north of the 1969 derailment site, 21 cars of a freight train derailed. Several of them smashed into a trackside fuel storage area, setting four 500gallon tanks of liquid petroleum gas afire.

More alarming, a 28,000-gallon storage tank was knocked eight inches askew on its saddle. It was not punctured, however, and Konrath said it could have wiped out "at least half of the village."

Konrath said there were 22 small tanks, one of which was still being allowed to burn Sunday night to exhaust its fuel.

While deputy sheriffs again advised residents to evacuate, Konrath's firemen used hoses to cool fire-heated tank metal and the fortunately unruptured big tank.

The explosive potential "could have cleared out the business area of our community," he said.

Many dwellings were emptied voluntarily, at least until occupants were convinced the fire hoses had matters under control.

"I think folks are a little more jumpy than they were in 1969," Konrath said. "One party told me it is like pushing your luck."

Reports of the number of persons who evacuated, at least for a few minutes, ranged to 300. Sgt. William Weiss of the sheriff's department said no one was ordered to move, and that evacuations were voluntary.

Weiss was driving a half mile from town when he saw a ball of fire over the buildings. He parked less than 100 yards from the 28,000-gallon tank, and was joined by other persons who felt secure behind Konrath's hoses.

But Konrath said Allenton is uneasy about the storage tank operation's nearness to the rails.

"We are trying to move it out," Konrath said. "A gasoline bulk plant used to be next door, but moved."

"Trucks are handling shipments now days," he said. "Very little of it seems to be coming in by rail anymore, which

High court now back in session

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Supreme Court opened its 1973 term today with a five-minute ceremony that gave no hint of the constitutional questions awaiting its consideration.

Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson put in a brief appearance to introduce new Solicitor Gen. Robert H. Bork, the government's lawyer before the high court.

The brief official ceremony marked the end of the court's three-month recess.

In those three months, the Watergate scandal has produced a constitutional question of historic proportions that the Supreme Court will almost certainly be asked to resolve this term.

Regardless of how lower courts rule, the justices seem assured of having placed before them the dispute over President Nixon's White House tape recordings of conversations on Watergate.

A federal district judge in Washington has ordered production of the tapes for his private inspection to determine what, if anything, contained in them may be presented to a grand jury investigating the Watergate scandal.

Nixon, claiming producing the tapes would undermine the constitutional right of executive privilege, has brought the issue to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here. A decision is expected daily.

For the Supreme Court's part, 77 cases, about half the normal docket for a term, have already been selected for argument and decision.

This week the justices will spend their time examining applications for hering and review. Next week the court will start hearing oral arguments in the cases already selected.

Saigon claims 300 are killed

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government today reported more than 300 government and Communist casualties in a 24-hour weekend battle 40 miles northwest of Saigon.

It was biggest battle near the capital since the cease-fire last January.

The South Vietnamese military command said Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces attacked two infantry positions less than a mile apart Saturday on the road between Tay Ninh, a provincial capital near the Cambodian border, and Khiem Hanh, a district town.

Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, the command spokesman, said the two posts were manned by two under-strength battalions totaling about 500 men. But he said they beat back repeated attacks Saturday and Sunday and counted 183 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong bodies around their positions.

Government casualties were nine killed and more than 100 wounded or missing, the command said. One of the South Vietnamese battalions was said to have suffered more than 35 per cent casualties.

Hien said the Communist gunners concentrated a heavy barrage of mortar and rocket fire against one of the positions while launching repeated infantry assaults against the other.

The fighting reportedly began with a mortar attack at 3 p.m. Saturday and lasted until 3 p.m. Sunday.

The attacking force, estimated to total about 1,200 men, was identified as the 101st Independent Viet Cong Regiment plus a regional Viet Cong battalion, Hien said.

Biggest domestic spending bill before panel, with veto threat

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Senate Appropriations Committee takes up the biggest domestic spending bill today with an eventual veto by President Nixon in prospect.

The bill provides funds for the Health, Education and Welfare and Labor departments.

Nixon and Congress have staged a running battle over such legislation since he took office. Nixon has vetoed the bills five times and only been overridden once.

This year the President recommended $31.6 billion for the departments, but the House voted $32.8 billion.

The Senate committee, which is expected to act on the bill in a couple of sessions, will increase the figure if past experience is any guide.

Many Democratic senators have said that Nixon's budget included inadequate funds for the health, education and antipoverty programs.

Attention will be centered on committee actions in Congress this week.

Originally, the legislators hoped the 1973 session would end this month. But now the leaders expect it to run well into November.

In floor action, the Senate planned to pass late today the $21-billion military procurement authorization bill requiring a 110,000-man cut in U.S. troops overseas.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Sunday the reduction is not likely to emerge intact from a conference with the House. "The House conferees don't look on it with much favor," he said.

"But I'm not discouraged at that. I anticipate some reductions will come out of this.

Floor debate also will begin during the day on the foreign economic aid bill authorizing $1.25 billion for the current year.

A mass transit operating subsidy measure is the only major legislation listed for debate this week in the House.

However, the House Ways and Means Committee begins closed-door work today on a Senate-passed bill to reform the private pension system.

On Wednesday, Ways and Means is to send to the House floor a sweeping foreign trade bill. Despite a plea from President Nixon, the panel is not expected to reverse its decision to include a provision denying trade concessions to Russia unless it eases its restrictive emigration policies.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., calls his Government Operations Committee into session today to begin writing a bill designed to give Congress greater control over the budget.

This had wide support early in the session but has become bogged down in controversy.

Meanwhile, the Senate Watergate committee canceled a hearing scheduled for Tuesday after former White House appointments secretary Dwight L. Chapin and another witness reportedly refused to testify.

The committee now is scheduled to resume hearings Wednesday with an appearance by Donald H. Segretti, a confessed political saboteur for President Nixon's 1972 reelection campaign.

No one noticed they died

MIAMI (AP) — Volton Jordan and Clarence Brinson were critically ill, homeless and penniless. They died sitting in wheelchairs in a hospital emergency ward, and no one noticed for hours.

Hospital officials said both men had been dead for several hours before someone noticed them slumped over in their wheelchairs this past week.

Brinson and Jordan, like many other destitute and elderly people, had been brought to the busy corridors of Jackson Memorial Hospital to wait until nursing home space could be found.

"There is no dignity for these people," a Jackson Hospital administrator said. "They are a forgotten breed. They have no place to go. This is their home until they find a place."

Officials said Brinson, 54, had been waiting three days in the hospital. Jordan, 60, had been sitting in his wheelchair for two days. A medical examiner said Jordan died last Friday of heart disease, with other complications. He said Brinson died last Tuesday of chronic pulmonary disease.

Ten patients like Brinson and Jordan were waiting at the hospital Sunday.

They are indigent elderly, dependent upon public money. They are put in wheelchairs in the hospital's emergency ward, brought there from private homes and residential hotels to wait for admittance to nursing homes that will accept welfare patients.

Officials say that process normally takes two or three days. It can be longer. The patients sit and wait until a home is found.

"We consider them boarders rather than patients," hospital spokesman Bill Keck said of the welfare patients. "They are in wheelchairs because we have no beds to admit them.

"Nurses and nurse assistants feed them three times a day and care for any other needs that boarders may request."

Keck said he knew of no other cases like Brinson and Jordan in which patients had died in their wheelchairs and gone unnoticed for several hours.

Officials say finding nursing home beds for the indigent is becoming more difficult because many homes say they can't afford to keep patients for the $13.50 a day the county pays them.

They said the 10 patients who were waiting Sunday for a nursing home bed is about the average number of welfare "boarders" at the hospital. Earlier this year it was worse.

At one time about 30 "boarders" were stacked up in the waiting room. That problem was solved when the county raised from $11.50 to $13.50 the daily allowance it would pay nursing homes to take the patients.

"It's the same all over in every big city," a hospital administrator said. "It's a state problem, a national problem. I just don't know what it takes to get the public to start caring."

Nine perish, N.J. officials think arson

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) —"It was the kind of screaming that makes you sick ... A man kept yelling, 'I'm over here! My babies! My babies!'," said a woman who lives around the corner from a fire that killed at least nine persons.

Firemen were to resume searching today in the rubble of four burned-out tenements for the bodies of three persons missing since Saturday's fire. Fire officials suspected arson.

Authorities identified five of the victims as sisters Patricia Requena, 19, Jacqueline, 18, and Carrie, 17. Francisca Lopez, 50, and her 55-year-old husband Carlos.

Police said the other four bodies were not charred for positive identification.

Teddy Ward, 44, was trapped [illegible] in a suburban truck [illegible] Friday after he came to a [illegible] Railroad crossing, [illegible] the right of the railroad, Wauchula Police Deputy Howard Baker said.

He started across, apparently not seeing the approaching train which was traveling about 50 miles per hour. It struck the passenger side of his truck, impaling it on the front of the train, wrapped around the engine. It traveled [illegible] feet before the train could stop.

Ward had to be pried out of the vehicle by sheriff's deputies.

"I don't understand it," Baker said. "There was one little cut on the side of his nose. I thought he was all done."

He at first refused hospitalization but later was taken to Columbia Hospital in Milwaukee where he was listed in satisfactory condition. His wife said he had complained of a headache, chest

Agnew 'ruined,' but he'll keep swinging

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) —Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has said privately that he believes his political career has been destroyed. But he has come out swinging publicly at his accusers, determined to prove his innocence.

Aides said Agnew told a private weekend meeting of California Republican officials that even if he is exonerated of allegations of corruption, his political future has been destroyed.

Agnew spoke to the Republican officials Saturday after dramatically declaring war on his accusers in a nationally televised speech to a Republican women's convention in Los Angeles.

In that fiery address, a clearly angry Agnew said the charges were "false and malicious" and he was being framed by persons in Maryland because he would not stop investigations against them and that someone high in the Justice Department was out to get him to make up for bungling the Watergate investigation.

Afterward, Agnew is said to have told the California party leaders there would remain "lingering doubts" in the minds of many people even if his name is cleared. He made it clear that he does expect to be cleared of allegations of wrongdoing.

Agnew's pessimism was not shared by the convention delegates, and it was said that the California GOP leaders also believe his future is not ruined.

It remained to be seen whether Agnew's view of the future would be of support he received after Saturday's address, in which he again declared his innocence.

A federal grand jury in Baltimore is looking into alleged kickbacks to politicians by contractors in Maryland, where Agnew was formerly a county executive and governor.

In another development, Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel announced today the creation of an 11-member task force to study the state's long-standing practice of awarding engineering and architectural consultants' contracts without competitive bidding.

It is allegations that contractors made kickbacks in return for those contracts that led to the grand jury's indictment of Dale Anderson, the current Baltimore County executive. Presentation to the began last week, although Agnew's attorneys have filed motions to stop the probe.

In his Saturday speech, the vice president said the allegations against him were a frameup by persons seeking revenge because he refused to use his office to halt the federal inquiry into the activities of others in Maryland.

Some "small and fearful men" giving evidence against him have perjured themselves, Agnew asserted. He said he had never violated his public trust in any office.

Agnew also renewed more sharply than ever his charge that senior officials in the Justice Department were trying to destroy him politically to salvage reputations soiled by failure in Watergate and other criminal proceedings.

Gen. Elliot L. Richardson said he would "remain committed to the standards of conduct and fairness which Americans have long cherished and which our legal system is intended to protect."

Meanwhile, Newsweek magazine reported Sunday that a team of Nixon's own lawyers tried to work out a deal between the Justice Department and Agnew's lawyers.

The magazine said the Nixon team, headed by J. Fred Buzhardt, made the effort in meetings and telephone conversations last week.

Newsweek quoted a Justice Department official as saying that the Nixon team was seeking a deal starting from the department's "bottom-line requirement" that Agnew resign and plead guilty to a charge for which he

Pebble paperweight is colorful novelty

BY CAPPY DICK

A paperweight made of colorful marbles is today's fun-project for boys and girls. Figure 1 shows what it will look like when completed.

Begin by finding a jar lid of the entire inside of the lid. Lay the first level of marbles in the lid, fitting them as closely together as possible.

To place the next layer, apply a little glue to each marble and carefully place it in the hollow created by several marbles in the first row. Continue adding marbles in this manner until a single marble forms the top of the pyramid.

When the glue has dried, glue a piece of felt to the bottom so the metal lid will not scar any varnished surface on which it is placed.

The paperweight is then ready to use.

Tomorrow, how to make a mail-that-letter reminder ring!

Female physician heads hospital, fights battering

CHICAGO (AP) — Rowine Hayes Brown won't change her hours much because of her appointment as medical director of the huge Cook County Hospital.

Each day, Dr. Brown, 60, gets up at 4:55 a.m. in her Hyde Park apartment and 35 minutes later she arrives at Cook County Hospital, where her appointment to head the medical staff makes her the only woman in the nation heading the staff of a major hospital.

After taking on her new duties, she continues seeing the small patients of County Children's Hospital, the foundation of her life for nearly 30 years.

Dr. Brown is a pediatrician and a crusader against lead poisoning and child abuse.

Other pediatricians consult her at all hours of the day or night for advice on child poisonings. Often, after a midnight night about a child who swallowed lye or took a dangerous drug, she will go to the hospital.

"It's often hard to get back to sleep after something like that," she said.

Because many of her patients were victims of criminal acts, Dr. Brown decided she needed background in the law. She earned her law degree in 1961, attending classes at night and running Children's Hospital by day.

She only has time to read things like pediatric news or laws on health benefits. Movies? "I seldom have time to go. I used to go to the symphony, but I don't do that too often. I get up so early that I have to fold early..."

"I'm like a fireman, I always have my clothes ready the night before so I can get dressed fast, get out of the building fast."

Time out

The doctor, above, relaxes from her hectic schedule as director of Chicago's Cook County Hospital by watching her only professional sport team — the Chicago Bears — and concentrating on her highly developed technique of needlepoint.

Myths persist about women workers

If you are a mature woman it doesn't surprise you that in this era of so-called equal job rights, the government has just launched its heaviest attack ever on job discrimination on the basis of race, sex and national origin. You know why. You know it's much tougher for you to get a job than it is for a mature man or a young woman.

A new study for the Labor Dept.'s Manpower Administration reveals that despite the laws of our land and despite all the evidence proving that mature women are dependable, conscientious, competent workers, the discrimination remains blatant.

A sample group of women in the study, aged 14 to 24, held the same or higher positions on the job ladder than women 30 to 44; nearly a third of the older women had not progressed beyond the jobs of their youth; many of the working married women with children had actually moved to a lower occupational status.

And after 40, the discrimination intensifies. The unemployment rate for women 40 through 64 in 1972 was more than one-third higher than for men of the same age.

Why does the discrimination persist? Because the myths about the woman worker, and particularly the older woman worker, persist.

Myth

Women switch jobs much more frequently than men do and older women switch more frequently than younger women.

Reality

Labor Dept. studies show that women's job changing rates are just a mere bit higher than for men and men are more likely to change occupations than women. A new Civil Service study shows that turnover rates for women in their early 50s are about one-sixth the turnover rates for women in their 20s.

Myth

Women are absent from their jobs much more than men are, and thus women cost the employer much more money.

Reality

The absenteeism rate for illness or injury among women averages 5.5 days a year as against 4.9 days for men. This is not a significant difference and, since the figures ignore the fact that relatively few women work in high managerial positions, which always have been associated with lower absenteeism rates, even these percentages may be badly distorted in favor of men.

Myth

Older people (and women especially) are harder to train than young adults.

Reality

Tests measuring conceptual thinking reveal that people tend to do better as they age. One study cited at the 1971 White House Conference on Aging showed that the average participant at age 50 did better on a general intelligence test than he or she did as first-year college students.

Myth

In any period of high unemployment, women take jobs away from men, the traditional breadwinners.

Reality

In 1972, an average of 19,200,000 married women were in the labor force against an average of 2 million unemployed men. Thus, if all these married women quit and if all the unemployed men moved into their empty jobs, there would remain 17,200,000 unfilled jobs—causing one of the most horrendous economic disasters imaginable. What's more, few of today's unemployed men have the education, skills or other qualifications to fill jobs held by women as secretaries, nurses, schoolteachers.

Myth

Training women is a waste of money since they quit when they marry or have children.

Reality

The separations are only temporary. Even taking into account her child rearing, non-working years, the average woman worker has a work life expectancy of 25 years Moreover, women's quit rates have been decreasing markedly since the mid-1960s.

The law of our land going back to July 2, 1965, requires that all employes be treated without regard to sex in every phase of employment—hiring, firing, job training, promotion, pensions.

The only legal grounds for job discrimination on the basis of sex are: a "bona fide occupational qualification" (e.g., as it is for fashion models), if hiring a woman would violate our basic morals (e.g., as a men's restroom attendant) or if this would imply unreasonable extra expenses for an employer.

If you believe you are a target of discrimination simply because you are a woman, submit your complaint to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, 1800 G St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20506, or your nearest EEOC district office.

Housing's total concept is theme

MADISON — The application of design to the total concept of housing will be the topic of a lecture and film presentation by Richard A. Graham, associate professor of design at Michigan State University, Lansing, at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 12 at the University of Wisconsin-Madison campus.

The public is invited to attend the meeting which will be held in the Wisconsin Center Auditorium.

The lecture is being sponsored by the American Association of Housing Educators (AAHE) who will be meeting at the UW-Madison, Oct. 10 through 13. The conference will deal with all fields that affect housing, including land use, construction, social factors, economics and design.

Prof. Graham will focus on how design can be used to create the best human environment by taking into account the needs and desires of the users.

On Oct. 10, Agatha Norton, conference coordinator and professor of related arts at UW-M, will preside over a session featuring guest speaker, Phil H. Lewis Jr., professor of landscape architecture and director of the Environmental Awareness Center. He will speak on "Total Design in the Environmental 70's."

Glanda Pifer, president elect and USDA Housing Specialist, Washington, D.C., will take charge of the Oct. 11 morning session. Christine Salmon, A.I.A., associate professor of housing and interior design. Oklahoma State University, will speak on "Multi-Matrix of Housing."

Topics slated during other sessions include "Urban Core Rehabilitation Workshop," "Gaming Simulation in Housing Education," "Design Responsibilities," "Housing Policy, a Look Ahead," and "Celebrate Our Environment."

American Association of Housing Educators was founded 15 years ago at the request of land grant colleges. The conference purpose is for educators, researchers and extension workers in housing to meet and exchange information and ideas, working toward a more integrated concept of housing.

Prized wood

Incense cedar is prized for garden structures, because its heartwood is highly resistant to decay.

The ailing house

Protecting house from lightning

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

Q: We are planning our new siding for our house. We have been talking about aluminum, vinyl, stainless steel, as well as conventional wood, with our friends. We get conflicting answers and many opinions. One question nobody seems to be able to answer: Is one (or more) of these materials more likely to attract lightning than the others? — Fond du Lac.

A: Frankly, I don't know. But it's my firm belief that siding has nothing to do with whether lightning will hit or pass by. I also believe that if your house is located in a lightning-tempting place, you should have a top lightning rod service give it the fullest possible protection. (A TV antenna, by the way, protects only your set, not the house.)

Q: I own and operate a laundromat. The floor has asphalt tile firmly cemented to the concrete slab. All in excellent shape except that the tile surface is now somewhat porous. Is there anything I can do to prevent the surface from wearing down more than it is now? Wax is not enough, because the floor must be wiped at least once a day, besides spillage. —Wabeno.

A: About all that would have any permanence and cause the least disruption in operations would be putting another layer of tiles, solid vinyl suggested, on top. Even several coats of top-quality floor and deck enamel, with the kind of traffic your place gets, would not stand up too long.

Q: When the weather turns real hot and sticky, the outside of my flush tank sweats like a glass of ice water. It drips down on the floor so much I always have to mop it up. Other times of the year, no problem at all. Is there any really simple way to take care of this problem just during those hot spells? —Milwaukee

A: About the simplest I know is to wrap a bath towel around the tank, catching the upper edges under the tank top, but without letting the toweling touch the water inside (this would set up a blotting action). The towel will act as a good insulator between the cold tank and warm air. It will also catch and hold any drip.

I'm sure you know you can buy tank covers made especially for this purpose, in chenille of various shades. Usually sold in sets with matching seat cover and bath mat. You can buy precut, install-it-yourself plastic liners for various size tanks, to provide an insulating liner, so the outside of the tank won't get so cold it sweats in hot weather.

Q: Our TV room walls were paneled with knotty pine perhaps two years ago. At their installation they were nicely waxed. But nothing has been done to them since except dusting. Now they look a little shabby; although they are in as good condition as ever. Should I attempt to wash these walls? Or is there some other treatment which will restore original looks? —Milwaukee

A: A year or more ago I'd have recommended washing. But since that time several good products, in spray cans, have appeared which are made to solve this particular problem. They work very well, needing only a light spraying and even lighter buffing. One of these is "Regard," made by Johnson's Wax. A great work-saver, while the paneling looks new again.

Guesser often misses easier line of play

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

There comes a time in every man's life when he must guess and guess right: Which opponent has a queen of spades? If this happens to you often, you're probably missing some easier line of play.

Opening lead - ♡ Q

South won the first trick with the ace of hearts and immediately returned the jack of spades to see what West would do and how he would do it.

West, an experienced player, furnished a low spade with great tranquility. South brooded over this for a moment and then put up dummy's kind of spades.

This happened to be the wrong guess, but it wasn't fatal. Declarer's next move was the killer: He returned a low trump from dummy.

East discarded a club, and no guess could save South. He put the ace of spades and entered dummy with a club in order to lead a diamond.

West captured the king of diamonds with the ace and drew a round of trumps with the queen. This left only one trump in dummy, and South discovered that he couldn't ruff two low diamonds with only one trump.

South wound up losing two diamonds, one heart and one trump. Down one.

START DIAMONDS

South should lead a diamond at the third trick after entering dummy with the king of spades.

West can capture the king of diamonds with the ace, but he cannot remove dummy's trumps. Regardless of the defense, declarer takes the ace of spades, cashes the queen of diamonds and ruffs a diamond in dummy. He gets to his hand with the ace of clubs to ruff his last diamond with dummy's last trump. The defenders get a trump, a heart and only one diamond.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade, and the next player doubles. You hold: S- K 9 8 4 H- 6 4 3 2 D- 5 2 C- K 9 5. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three spades. This shows good trump support with a total count of 7 to 9 points. Your main object is to shut the opponent out. If partner goes on to game he must expect a rather poor hand as the dummy.

Consumer safety will highlight opening session of conference

CHICAGO — A keynote address on consumer product safety will highlight the opening sessions of the Women's Conference of the National Safety Council prior to the 61st Annual National Safety Congress. Mrs. Ruth Roos, Chicago's 1971-73 chairman of the women's conference, will preside.

Keynote speaker will be Richard Simpson, chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C., whose subject is "The Act...The Commission," at the morning session Oct. 27 in the Bel-Air Room of the Conrad Hilton Hotel.

The purpose of the day-long institute is to launch a new national H.O.M.E. program thrust by the women's conference whose members number some 60 national and international women's organizations with an outreach to more than 50 million women. H.O.M.E. stands for Home — Our Mutual Effort in safety.

Also featured on the morning agenda will be: Margaret Dana, Consumer Relations counsel, Chalfont, Pa., "Safety — a Joint Responsibility — Producers, Consumers, and Government"; John Ainlay, consultant, American Petroleum Institute, Chicago, "Flammable Liquids — An Increasing Problem."

Saturday afternoon highlights will be: Dr. Sheila Fleichter, presenting Dr. David Pittle's research project, "Improving Consumer Safety Through Innovative Technical Education"; panel on "How to Implement the H.O.M.E. Program Through the Women's Conference." A preview, "What's Your Home Safety I.Q.," will be given in a slide presentation.

On Sunday a Women's National Citation Awards breakfast will be held at 9:30 a.m. in the Buckingham Room of the Pick-Congress Hotel. Presentation of the 1973 Women's Citation Awards of Honor, Awards of Merit, and Certificates of Commendation will be presented to winners for outstanding safety programs by women's and parent's groups. Eleanor Freeman, Evanston, is chairman.

The annual meeting luncheon on Sunday in the Windson Room will include a speech by NSC president, Howard Pyle, and formal introduction of new conference members as well as members of the conference's Women of Safety Councils Section (WOSC).

The dynamic and ongoing National Safety on the Streets (S.O.S.) Crusade, sponsored by the Women's Conference, will highlight sessions beginning at 1:30 p.m. Oct. 29 in the Patrick Room of the Sheraton-Blackstone Hotel. Jean Veldwyk, Seattle, 1973-74 chairman of the women's conference, presides.

At this time Mahala Evens, director, development and training, Chicago Model Cities, Chicago, will be introduced.

At 7:30 p.m., Sunday in the Hilton Hotel, an Open House of the women's conference will honor retiring National Safety Council president, Howard Pyle, and assistant general manager, Marv Nicol. A progress report on the S.O.S. Crusade will be given by Mahala Evans. Mrs. Dean Dickens, director, Defensive Driving and Civic Affairs, Georgia Safety Council, will speak on the NSC Pilot Community - Action S.O.S. in Atlanta.

The National Safety Congress, sponsored by the National Safety Council, is the world's largest safety convention, and women's conference events are among the 200 safety meetings. Some 300 exhibits by 500 companies are anticipated.

Ann Landers

Consider the compliment

Dear Ann Landers: I am 5 feet 10 inches in my stocking feet, which is pretty tall for a girl. During my adolescence I felt like a giraffe, but Mom kept at me to stand straight and be proud of my height. Even though I was taller than most of the boys in my classes, it never bothered me much.

I'm not going to ask the obvious question—what to do about a short boyfriend (my sweetie is 6'4" and he has a great build). The problem is that whenever I go where there is music, every short guy in the place rushes over and wants to dance with me. I feel ridiculous with those sawed-off runts who seem to enjoy resting their heads on my bosom. (I feel like a nursing mother.)

How can I get out of it without offending the half-pints?—Mt. Shasta

Dear Shasta: Where's your sense of humor? If those shorties didn't think you were a real doll they wouldn't ask you to dance. If they feel comfortable about it, consider it a warm compliment and enjoy the fun.

Dear Ann Landers: You've let waitresses sound off, as well as sales clerks, secretaries, bosses, customers—just about everybody. Now it's my turn.

In many small cafes it isn't possible to have an automatic dishwasher, so the job is done by real, honest-to-goodness, live people. Any dishwasher will tell you that if he turns his back for a few minutes the dishes multiply like rabbits.

Most dishwashers get the same salary as waitresses but no tips. I realize it isn't practical to suggest that people go to the kitchen and tip the dishwasher, but I do have a few suggestions that would make our lives a lot easier.

Use ashtrays. Don't mash your cigarets or cigars into the leftover food. It makes a terrible mess.

Don't put chewing gum on your plate. It's murder to get off if another plate is stacked on top of it.

Don't put crumpled paper napkins in a plate that has syrup or honey on it. It sticks like glue.

If you ask a waitress to wash a thermos jug or a baby's bottle, the dishwasher is the one who will be doing it. Give him the dime or whatever.—Nebraska

Dear Neb: Thanks for the suggestions. You've educated a lot of people today, including me.

Dear Ann Landers. A recent letter from a 17-year-old girl who had VD prompted me to write this letter. Illinois has had in operation for several months "VD Checkline," a statewide, toll-free telephone service which has helped thousands of people. A similar service is offered in other states.

The phones are manned by high school and college volunteers who are trained to respond to questions pertaining to VD treatment centers, etc.

Anyone in Illinois who needs such help should call 1-800-252-8989 between 8:30 a.m. and 9 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 12 noon until 5:00 p.m. on Saturdays. (No one will ask your name or age.)

Please urge your readers to call us if they want information or directions.—Robert C. Griffin, V.D. Program, Dept. Public Health, Springfield, Ill.

Dear Mr. Griffin: Since gonorrhea is second only to the common cold in infectious diseases in the United States (and syphilis is not far behind), I appreciate the opportunity to publicize this service. (P.S. I called the number myself to check the caliber of phone personnel and I can report that it is superb!)

Women in today's world topic for year's study

Unit 1 Presbyterian Women (UPW) of Memorial Presbyterian Church are centering a yearlong program on: Everywoman in Today's World. Program and devotions are organized around the prayer life of Everywoman as reflected in Marjorie Holmes' book, "Who Am I, God?"

Woman on the Move will be the program at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 20. Speaker will be Mrs. Elbert Norton who will deal with the effects of mobility and change on family and community life.

There will be a skit at 1:30 p.m. Dec. 18 called "The Amazing Heritage." It concerns UPW and the women who started it with those "female cent societies." Mrs. Richard Platt is chairman assisted by Mrs. Tom Orbison. The program coincides with the church's all-day Christmas cookie sale chaired by Mrs. Fred Burdett.

Woman Alone will be the program at 1:30 p.m. Feb. 19. It will be introduced by Mrs. Karie Naggs doing an interpretive dance which expresses the feeling life of Everywoman who lives alone. Mrs. Harold Heller will discuss the lives of women who live alone and the ways in which older women alone are organizing to form their own power and pressure groups.

After luncheon April 9 guests will explore the theme of Woman and Creativity with Mrs. Edward Uehlein who makes and teaches pottery in her own home. She will give a demonstration and comment on her experiences in mastering her art medium.

Everywoman and Identity in the 70s will be explored in two events.

For all women in the church an evening mini-course led by Mrs. Leland Ester is slated every two weeks beginning at 8 p.m. Oct. 2. Social expectations, relationships with others and dreams will be explored.

An all-day workshop is planned Nov. 10 at the church which is open to all women in the area. Marge Engelman, director of adult education at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay will be keynote speaker. The workshop will center on Women's Liberation in a Biblical perspective. The workshop is for women who are interested in Bible study but are not sure they are interested in women's liberation as well as for those interested in women's liberation who are not sure the Bible has anything relevant to say on this subject.

All attending will study Biblical passages concerning women and interpretations of those passages which have profoundly affected women's lives in the church and in society. Co-ordinator is Mrs. John Witherell. Teachers are Mmes. Clifford Pierson, Robert Larsen and Gilbert Shibley.

Also scheduled are rummage sales Oct. 18 and May 2, an all-church dinner Oct. 27 chaired by Mrs. Dale Williams and featuring an exotic menu and a surprise program, and a mother-daughter banquet March 28.

Excessive vitamin A can cause disorders

Dear Dr Thosteson Is it permissible for me to drink pure carrot juice which I prepare in my juicer? If so, please let me know if six or eight ounces of the juice is too much for me to consume each day

I like carrot juice very much but do not want to consume too much I also take celery juice orange juice etc but it is the carrot juice I have been told is dangerous when taken in large quantities Is this correct? —Mrs N G

That's too much carrot juice too much carrots in any form

The arithmetic is simple

Whole carrots contain about 11,000 units of vitamin A for each three ounces Since you speak of pure carrot juice, I assume that it is just that If water were added, the vitamin A (carotene) content would be considerably less

The pure juice you are drinking daily would contain about 33,000 units of carotene If you have been consuming this much over an extended period you should by now be noticing a yellowing of the palms This is not any great problem of itself, but it can indicate an excessive intake of vitamin A which the system cannot dispose of

Excessive vitamin A can cause skin, hair, bone and liver disorders I suggest you cut down either your daily intake or decide on a few carrotless days each week

As in most foods, we all would be better off following the time honored ancient Greek admonishment — "Nothing too much"

Dear Dr Thosteson I have two cataracts developing, but everyone says to forget about them

Must I wear glasses if I have them operated on? My vision is 20/25 and 20/50 and I wear glasses only for reading or close work —Mrs M M

The advice to "forget about them" isn't too bad, because there is nothing you can do to change things Cataracts as a rule develop quite slowly When or if your vision becomes too dim, the cataracts can be removed —nearly half a million people a year have it done

You will need glasses after the operation because the lenses of the eyes have to be removed You need glasses to make up for them However, contact lenses have reached a fine stage of development and are in much use after cataract operations

Dear Dr Thosteson Could you explain the dangers of having an IUD as compared to other forms of birth control? On the news a few nights ago I heard a very brief report saying that IUDs have been found to be very dangerous, but no explanation I have had very little trouble with my IUD for a year and a half —G W

I certainly don't know any basis for calling them "very dangerous" There have been cases, although certainly not numerous, in which an IUD punctured the uterus or caused bleeding It is my impression that new designs of IUDs, changed both in shape and in the materials used have pretty much overcome this risk

Aside from that, some women automatically expel an IUD and others develop irritation These women must, of course rely on some other contraceptive method

The IUD is not the most certain type of contraceptive but it is not at the bottom of the list, either —its reliability is rated in the upper 90s, percentagewise

Birth control is a much discussed and highly relevant topic in today's society Find out all you should know about birth control in Thosteson's easy to read booklet, "The 12 Birth Control Methods" For a copy, write to him in care of The Post Crescent, enclosing 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed (use ZIP code), stamped envelope

Officials will spend Tuesday in a wheelchair

A number of Fox Cities officials and hospital personnel have agreed to spend the day in wheelchairs Tuesday as part of the "Awareness Day" program sponsored by the Fox Valley Area Chapter of the National Paraplegia Foundation.

The organization had asked the officials to do this in an effort to make the people aware of the problems encountered by handicapped in everyday life.

The day coincides with the opening of the state legislature session which will consider the "mobility package" including numerous bills combating artificial barriers.

The city officials who have agreed to spend the day in a wheelchair are: James Adams, mayor, and Roman Rappert, police chief, Menasha; Mayor Roman Hauser, Police Chief Vern Wollerman, Neenah, and Chief Earl Wolff and Inspector John Gosch, of the Appleton Police Department.

Hospital officials who will be involved are John McKay, director of industrial injury clinic at the Theda Clark Memorial Hospital, Neenah; John Shepard, administrator, and Mrs. Betty Beyer, director of nursing, both of Appleton Memorial Hospital;

Mrs. Zada Siebers, director of nursing; Mrs. Phyllis Giraldo, chiarman of the committee on architectural barriers and head of the occupational therapy department; Wayne Bradley, public relations director, and Carol Van Hout, RN, hospital educator, all of St. Elizabeth Hospital. Wilfred Lobig, St. Elizabeth administrator, had also planned on taking part but due to illness had to withdraw.

The participants were asked to conduct a typical day's work from a wheelchair. They have, however, been requested to engage in a number of specific activities which they may not encounter in an everyday situation so that they have an idea of what people in wheelchairs have to encounter

They have been asked to make an effort to use the ramps built into various curbs which were replaced this summer; visit a church, get a book from the library, use a public restroom, transfer out of a car parked between two others in a lot, pay a parking ticket at the police station, use a drinking fountain or a public phone booth, get in or out of place of employment, and use a recreational facility, such as a

Hope gone for school aid boost

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent staff writer

The visions of large increases of state aids that danced in the heads of public school administrators a few months ago have disappeared, as they realize the realities of cost-shifting and budget controls.

Most administrators will have to be content with the realization there is no state aid bonanza in the 1973-75 state budget, but in Outagamie County public school districts, there may an additional financial hangover to accompany the reality about aids

The hangover could come from a series of expected events —or events already in motion —that could mean a severe drop in state aids to Outagamie schools in 1975. The net effect could be a drop in the amount of money available for calendar 1975 for city or joint school districts or 1974-75 for common or unified districts, or the necessity to increase local school taxes to pick up the aid slack.

The series of events and their impacts are:

—The shift next year to a current year valuation figure for determining state school aids —instead of the past year figure. With valuation rising about 5 to 10 per cent per year, this has the effect of doubling this rise

A district's valuation is weighed against a state-established guaranteed valuation-behind-each-student figure for determining school aids. This guaranteed valuation will rise from $71,200 per student for 1974 to $74,800 per student for 1975. But actual county valuation will grow much more, closing the gap between it and the guaranteed level, and thus causing an aid reduction.

— The reassessment of Outagamie County in 1974 by the state will increase the value of property with school districts and have the effect of piling on valuation for formula aid purposes, thus reducing still more the gap between valuation and guaranteed valuation.

Outagamie hasn't been reassessed since 1966. It and Juneau County are the only two scheduled for the 1974 reassessment, as the State Department of Revenue carries on a continuous program of reassessing a few counties per year.

—The state budget-imposed control on the 1974 school budget, forcing districts to increase their operating budgets less than they feel is needed. They will be hard-pressed to make up this in the 1975 budgets.

—The state budget-imposed shift of the state share of teachers' retirement and Social Security premium payments to the local district. This is expected to cost Appleton an additional $1 million next year.

The budget controls and premium payment shifts were included in the 1973-75 budget which promised major aid increases for most schools. However, these aids will drop in 1975 below the 1974 level under the formula provided, even without considering the specific factors facing Outagamie schools.

Gasoline prices up some places, same at others

Fox Cities motorists were paying higher prices for gasoline at many service stations today, but an almost equal number of operators were holding off, expressing confusion over the latest Cost of Living Council ruling.

The latest ruling, which went into effect Friday, will permit station operators to charge the same price they charged last May 15, plus any wholesale price increases between May 15 and Sept. 22.

Prior to Friday, the dealers were restricted to their last Jan. 10 retail price, or the Aug. 1 wholesale price, plus seven cents, whichever was greater. Most Fox Cities stations were involved in a gasoline price war last January and were forced to take the Aug. 1 wholesale price, plus seven cents.

During the freeze period, most wholesale gasoline prices went up, resulting in widespread dealer protests.

Jack Zentner, Oshkosh, president of the Retail Gasoline Dealers Association of Wisconsin, said "the price's are going back to what's considered a normal margin."

He said that while the dealers were a lot better off than they were under the original freeze, "we still must absorb any future wholesale increases."

While not predicting what would happen if wholesale prices go up again. "I imagine there will be more protests," he said.

Dealers for most of the major oil companies indicated they expected more wholesale price increases within a week.

Jerry Thompson, operator of Jerry's Standard Service, said he raised his prices 2.2 cents Saturday. "We're back to where we were before the freeze came in," he said. He said he calculated his increase on newspaper reports of the Cost of Living Council action.

Thompson also said he expected another wholesale price increase soon which he must absorb.

V. Paul Verbrick, operator of Verbrick's Texaco in Neenah, said he raised his price 1-cent because he hasn't seen any formal guidelines yet. "I don't want to take a chance on raising it too much," he said. He said he's already had two wholesale price increases this year.

At Ray Johnson's Mobil Service it's an even more cautious attitude. "We haven't raised prices yet because we don't know what to do," an employe said. "We're waiting for confirmation of the action."

Harold Vernon, operator of Harold's West College Shell, said he went up 1.7 cents Saturday morning. "When you lose $2,000 or $3,000 in a month, you have to do something," he said. He added that he's had two wholesale price increases this year, the latest one Saturday.

Most of the refinery-owned independents were holding fast on their prices, the managers saying they had not been notified of any price changes from their home offices.

John A. Love, director of the White House Energy Policy Office, was quoted by the Associated Press as saying that he felt price controls would be lifted from petroleum and petroleum products.

Friends forever

Del LaMarche, 5, of route 1, Menasha, holds 2-month-old Bugs while he and Dusty the collie rub noses. Dusty found the baby rabbit in a field near the LaMarche home early in August. A mower had cut the tall grass in the field, had killed one baby rabbit and apparently sent the mother and most of her young ones fleeing, abandoning this rabbit. Dusty brought the baby to the LaMarches, who fed and housed him, and the dog since has protected the rabbit from all "dangers," including children other than Del. The kindergarten-age lad is the son of Mrs. and Mrs. Del LaMarche. (Post-Crescent photo)

Do-it-yourself probate begins in state today

Do-it-yourself probate, commonly referred to as informal probate, went into effect today in Wisconsin. For any estate where the deceased died after midnight Sunday, informal probate may be attempted.

Primarily, do-it-yourself probate allows interested parties in an estate to handle their own probating, thus avoiding the expense of hiring an attorney, unless one of the parties contests the estate.

Also, the do-it-yourself probate involves a different procedure for probating an estate, with the newly created probate registrar playing the key role —a role similar to the one the probate judge played in the past.

Joyce Schumaker, Outagamie County register in probate for 15 years under Judge Urban P. Van Susteren, has been named by Van Susteren to also serve in the new position of probate registrar.

The Legislature adopted the probate reform measures last spring. Included in these was a measure for allowing the termination of joint tenancy (of spouses when one dies) without the full-fledged probate process, including the hiring of legal counsel. That went into effect last June.

The main thrust of the reforms was to eliminate the legal requirement of court action —and therefore, the hiring of an attorney — in settling most estates. While the executor of the will or no-will estate — now called the personal representative — formerly was generally inactive in handling the affairs of the estate, he or she now will be forced into performing the necessary actions.

Van Susteren said his court and probate registrar would cooperate in attempting to help people wade through the required paperwork in completing the probating of an estate. However, he said "we're not going to give counsel or advice on heavy matters."

Van Susteren was hesitant to predict how effective the do-it-yourself probate would work. He suggested there was considerable money involved, with lawyers' fees per year being from $600,000 to $750,000.

He expressed some doubts about its chances for success, at least in some cases. Without the attorney, the interested parties can be less sure of the completeness of the probate job done, plus they may not be aware of the full tax advantages of handling the estate in a certain manner.

However, Van Susteren added that if even one-tenth of the fees are saved, say $60,000 or $75,000 per year, then it probably was worthwhile.

Under the new probate law, the personal representative must contact the probate registrar with proof of death. Then, the personal representative must also prove his being accepted as personal representative, either through being named in the will as such or by approval by the interested parties through a written consent procedure.

When she is satisfied everything is in order, the probate registrar will issue "credentials" to the personal representative who then will handle the settlement of debts, payment of taxes and other matters. The personal representative then must file a final accounting with Miss Schmumaker.

Van Susteren said the estate matter would come into court, necessitating legal counsel, "only when there's a fight or an argument." And only the contested matter would be handled in court, so an estate conceivably could bounce back and forth between the court and probate registrar.

The registrar and the probate court are located on the second floor of the courthouse. The probate forms can be purchased for do-it-yourself probate from the registrar.

Van Susteren said the new probate program would greatly increase the work burden of Schumaker. He said she would try operating without additional help to see if the load can be handled.

He said he would ask the county board to double Schmumaker's $8,700 salary because she still is going to be handling her only slightly decreased register in probate and other duties.

Wife held in knifing death at Oshkosh

OSHKOSH — A woman charged with first degree murder after the stabbing death of her husband Sunday has been admitted to the Winnebago Mental Health Institute for a mental examination.

Susan Clemans, 41, 935 Nicolet Ave., was taken to the institute after a brief initial appearance in County Court today. She was formally charged with the murder of her husband, Charles F. Clemans, also age 41. Clemans, manager of the Howard Johnson Motor Lodge of Oshkosh, was stabbed to death at his home shortly before 3 p.m. Sunday.

Mrs. Clemans' attorney, Lewis Magnusen, asked for the tests to be conducted at the institute before a preliminary hearing is held. The attorney noted that the woman has been under psychiatric care in the past. Dist. Atty. William Carver made no objection and the case was adjourned indefinitely while the tests are made. No bond was set. County Judge James V. Sitter said he would set bond at the time of the preliminary hearing.

Clemans died at Mercy Medical Center at 3:24 p.m., about one-half hour after being stabbed. According to police, he was stabbed in the back while watching television in the den of the Clemans home. According to police, he then ran from the home, and was followed by Mrs Clemans who wielded a kitchen knife. The couple scuffled in

New bus service starts with style

BY CLIFF MILLER
Post-Crescent staff writer

Today was "Bright Blue Monday" for Appleton bus service, complete with a ribbon-cutting by the mayor and volunteer "stewardesses" serving coffee and donuts.

The occasion was the introduction of new-look buses and return to 30-minute service all day on the six city routes.

The bus line had its drivers decked out in new black sweaters and bright blue neckties or neckerchiefs, to match the freshly painted blue trim on the mostly silver-colored buses that went into service today.

When school children climbed aboard this afternoon to ride home, the drivers were to hand out balloons in honor of the occasion.

Mayor James Sutherland clipped an orange ribbon, then climbed aboard with three city transit commission members and an alderman to ride Route No. 3 bus. The bus left the College Avenue-Oneida Street starting point a few minutes behind its scheduled 7:45 a.m. departure time due to the ceremonies and picture-taking, and made its half-hour tour of the north-central portion of the city.

The mayor and other officials, though invited to be among the day's first riders to help call attention to the improved bus service, were paying passengers. Each dropped the 35 cents fare into the coin box as he boarded.

The bus was a 1962 GMC vehicle recently bought from the defunct Evanston, Ill., bus line. It is one of a dozen bought by Fox River Bus Lines, Inc., including seven that will be leased to the firm's subsidiary, Appleton City Transit, Inc., for use on the city routes. New buses also are in use on the parent firm's inter-urban routes between Kimberly and the E. College Avenue "Strip" and between Appleton and Neenah-Menasha.

For the past two years the city bus schedule has provided 30-minute service only for the first part of the morning and late-afternoon, with hourly service during the rest of the day and on Saturday.

Starting today, half-hour service will be provided all day, from 5:45 a.m. to 5:45 p.m., the starting times of the first and last buses of the day, Monday through Saturday.

The new buses, built between 1960 and 1963, replace buses dated from 1947 to 1955. They are the same size — 45-passenger — but they feature bigger windows for more visibility, more modern engines for lower operating cost and less exhaust fumes, a number of safety and driver convenience devices not available on the older vehicles, and more comfort.

Mrs. Gloria Kuepper, bus line president, told the mayor that one feature she expects riders to appreciate is a better heating system. "These buses are warm," she said.

One bid for fuel received by county

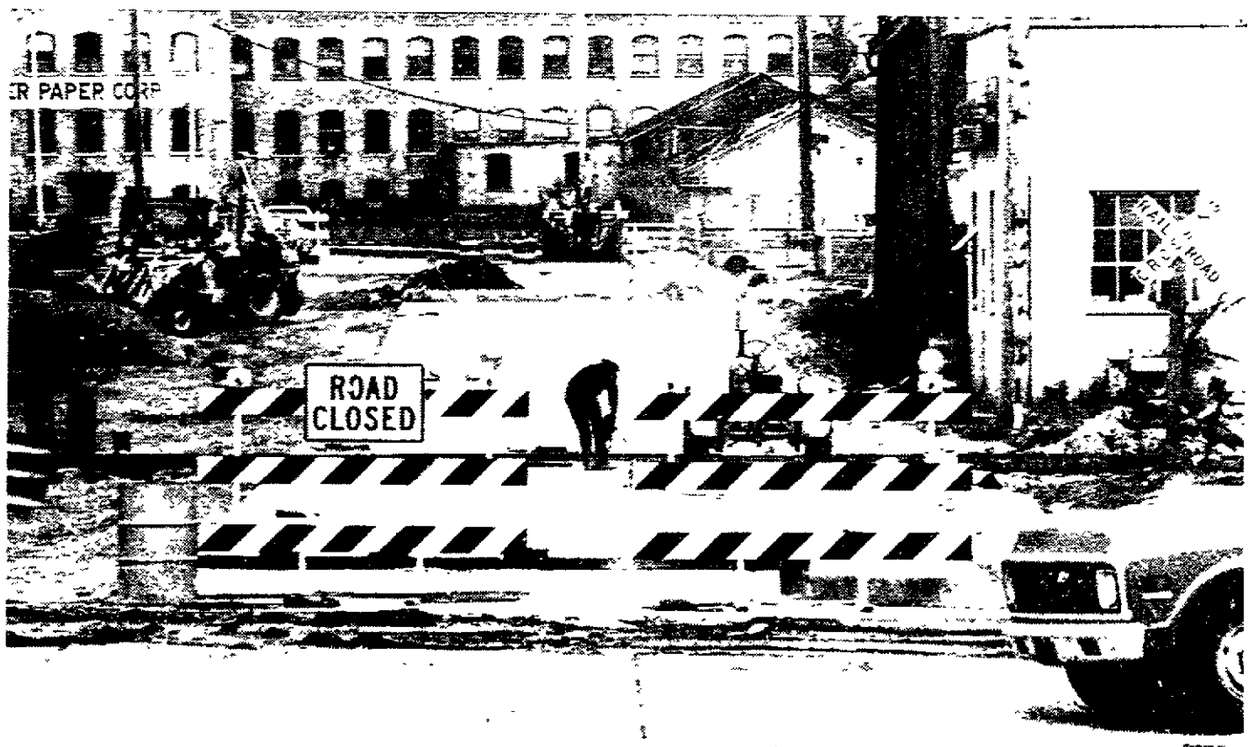
Outagamie County received a lone bid today for supplying gasoline and diesel fuel for the next six months.

Amoco Oil Co. (Standard Oil of Indiana) bid 16.755 cents per gallon for regular grade gasoline and 15.835 cents per gallon for diesel fuel.

The bid is for fuel supplies from Oct. 1 to March 31 and will guarantee no more fuel than what Amoco supplied during the same period last year.

Clarence Brownson, county highway commissioner, said Amoco supplied about three-fourths of the gasoline last winter and most of the diesel fuel. The gasoline price is the same as the county has been paying, Brownson said, but the diesel fuel price is up .9 cent per gallon"

Four bids were received for road salt. Morton Salt, International Salt and Diamond Crystal Salt all bid $11.75 per ton for truck delivery. The Diamond and Morton bids were on 20 ton lots and the International bid was on 22 ton lots. Domtar Chemical bid $12.35 per ton for 20 ton lots. Truck delivered prices for all of the companies were lower than ra;l deliVered prices.



Still closed

Half of the main slab of concrete on S. Oneida Street through Appleton s industrial Flats has been poured, and the other lane is scheduled for pouring this week, according to the city engineer's office. The city s second most heavily used Fox River crossing has been closed about a month for the reconstruction project. (Post-Crescent photo)

FBI keeps 'kidnaping' details under wraps

Conflicting statements and a news ltd by the Federal Bureau of Investigation still muddy circumstances surrounding the disappearance and finding last week of a former Appleton man who was believed to have been abducted from his Indiana home

Thomas J Barnard, 23, a Notre Dame University graduate student, is back home in Mishawaka, Ind., according to police in that community who still doubt there was a kidnaping.

In response to a reporter's questions, a Mishawaka police official said the doubts are based on information gathered by his department and some of the findings of the FBI. He declined, however, to reveal those findings.

"It didn't seem like it panned out that there were two people involved," the official said.

FBI offices in Indianapolis and Phoenix, where Barnard was found Friday, have released almost nothing about the case and have not stated whether kidnaping was involved

A spokesman in the Indianapolis FBI office said this morning that agents are still trying to determine if a federal crime was committed. Kidnaping is a federal offense

The final word on whether Barnard was kidnaped will have to come from the FBI, Mishawaka police said today

A police spokesman there said Barnard called the department over the weekend and asked if police wanted to talk to him. He was told they would, but probably not until after the FBI is through talking with him.

Police said they have not determined positively if there was a burglary at the Barnard home Tuesday, the day Barnard was reported missing. A determination probably will not be made until after police are able to talk with Barnard, the spokesman said

Barnard's wife, Nancy, who taught at Roosevelt Junior High School in Appleton last year, reported the burglary when she returned home from her teaching job last Tuesday afternoon. Only a few pieces of jewelry were missing from a bedroom, police said.

Later Tuesday Mrs Barnard reported her husband missing. He had told her Tuesday morning he would hitchhike to classes in nearby South Bend. The Bar-$24 million for roads in county?

OSHKOSH —Within the next six years the state highway commission could be pumping in excess of $24 million into the construction and rehabilitation of state trunk system within Winnebago County.

Charles Ryan, Green Bay, district 3 engineer, met this morning with the county highway commission and representatives from Oshkosh, Neenah and Menasha to gain input in prepariing the district's long-range plan.

Ryan explained that the highway commission's share of the 1973-75 biennial budget had been cut from $25 million to $5 million, with the directive to draft a long-range proposal.

The long-range proposal, Ryan explained, must be four-fold in character, including mass transit; identifying the state highway maintenance and improvement minimum spending; evaluation of the existing aid program to local units of governments, and proposing methods of financing for the total lacakage.

"It's the second item (identifying the maintenance and improvement minimums) that we're here today to get," Ryan said.

Already committed for fiscal 1974 is $14.4 million worth of construction more than half of which will be going for the Little Lake Butte des Morts Bridge and the west side interchange with U.S. 41.

Also included are closing off U.S. 41 between State 110 in Oshkosh and County Trunk G just south of Neenah, $2.8 million; between State 44, south of Oshkosh, and State 110, $74,000; State 114 (Winneconne Avenue) and State 150, $280,000; preliminary work on the Breezewood Lane interchange, $530,000.

The only project for which funding has been committed in 1975 is completion of the U.S. 41-Breezewood Lane interchange which is estimated at $3.1 million.

Stressing the need for time, Ryan explained that he must have his program submitted to Madison by Oct. 26, so that the state-wide plan can be in the hands of legislators by Jan. 1.

Admitting that "it's impossible to do an accurate job" in putting the program together, Ryan said that his office is attempting to approach the local units of government through meetings such as the one held today to get adequate input for the proposal.

Although beyond 1975 no funds have been committed, the district office is proposing about $6.5 million worth of work, which, in its opinion, "should be high on any priority list for state highway improvements."

Included on this list is the reconstruction of State 114 through Neenah (Commercial Street) and Menasha (Washington-Tayco St.) which is estimated at $355,000. A new intersection at the State 47-Foster Street-Calumet Street in the Town of Menasha, adjacent to the Vaaley Fair Shopping Center, is estimated at $190,000.

County Highway Commissioner Robert Graf asked why nothing had been included for the reconstruction of U.S. 10.

Ryan said "we agree" but that has been plugged into Calumet County's program.

"That project is complicated because we need the commitment from two townships and the city of Appleton has made a commitment but we haven't got to the townships yet," Ryan said. The townships are the towns of Harrison and Menasha.

Neenah Public Works Director Wayne Bryan objectted to the proposal of rebuilding State 114 without including any work on the bridges. Ryan offered that consideration will be given to widening the bridges but added "what we do at that time will depend on monies available."

Ryan explained that much more federal money will be available, expecially in urban areas, but said the procedu e to get the money is going to be much more complicated.

He explained that there has been a much sharper line drawn between rural and urban roads and money slated for one no longer can be diverted to the other. For instance, urgan areas will be able to get money for urban systems which include high traffic arterials and collector streets only.

He explained that the money may be allocated on a $5 to $7 per person basis but added "we have the appropriation, but we don't have the authorization on how to spend it yet."

Weather willing, paving to be ended this week

If weather and machinery cooperate, the last of the concrete to be poured on main slabs of Appleton streets being repaved this year should be in place by Friday, City Engineer Thomas Harp has announced.

Harp issued the following schedule for Fox Valley Construction Co. crews this week, barring delays by weather or mechanical problems:

Concrete was scheduled to be poured today on Schaefer Circle and Madison Street; Tuesday on S. Oneida Street through the industrial "flats" and on Fountain Avenue intersections; Wednesday on Schaefer Street; Thursday on Harding Drive and Fountain Avenue intersections, and Friday on Schaefer Circle.

Harp said restoration of terraces and general cleanup will follow completion of the concrete installation, after which his department and the contractor will inspect all streets in the program to schedule completion of minor remnants of work.

The first lane of the new Oneida flats roadway is in place and the second half of the new pavement had been scheduled for pouring last week but was delayed by weather and some telephone work, Harp said.

In other projects, Harp listed water main installation along Fremont Street between Jackson Street and Telulah avenue as continuing in the municipal golf course vicinity, while cleanup work is all that remains of sanitary and storm sewer installations at various locations and the sanitary sewer replacement project was completed last week. Street-patching continues at various sites where pavement was opened previously for utility work, and is very near completion, according to Harp.

Togetherness programs slated

Organizational meetings for the Appleton YMCA Indian Guide and Princess programs have been scheduled for this week.

The fathers who wish to get involved with the Princess program will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and those in the Indian Guide program, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The project provides opportunities for fathers to be active with their 6- to 9-year-old children and encourages better communication, according to Bruce Ahlquist, who is in charge.

The groups are organized into tribes, with the maximum size of the tribe running around eight couples. The attendance must be in pairs, since the purpose of the program is togetherness, Ahlquist explained.

Meetings are twice a month and include games, crafts, stories of Indian lore and outdoors, and periodic hikes and athletic events. There also are occasional campouts, canoe trips and holiday activities.

Memorial raises rates

Appleton Memorial Hospital, faced with increasing costs, has raised its rates, effective today, according to a spokesman.

The new daily rates for a private room are $55; for a semi-private room, $48, and for a pediatrics and ward room, $46. This is a $2 increase in each.

The nursery rate is $30, up from $27, while daily service fees for intensive and coronary care units is $130, an increase of $20.

The adjustments were approved by the Wisconsin Hospital Rate Review Committee and are consistent with guidelines incorporated in the economic stabilization program.

The adjustment was timed to commence with the initial day of the hospital's fiscal year, which also begins today.

Nelson won't discount opponents

By TIM WYNGAARD
Special to the Post-Crescent

WASHINGTON — Gaylord Nelson says he isn't taking anything for granted.

The man who turned a Republican governor out of the statehouse and a Republican senator out of Congress says he doesn't consider himself a shoo-in with Wisconsin voters next year.

"I'm honest enough with myself to admit that I like being in this position a lot more than running against Mel Laird or Warren Knowles," he says of the difficulties the state Republican Party is having in finding a credible candidate to run against him in 1974.

But being placed on the bottom of the GOP's priority list for the next election by newly elected Republican Party Chairman David Sullivan hasn't influenced Nelson's planning. "I don't discount anyone's abilities," he said in an interview in his Senate office here.

"When I started running for governor, it was the same.

"Did you ever see that Harris poll I had done in June of 1958?

"It showed that 7 per cent of the people of Wisconsin knew who Gaylord Nelson was, and about 89 per cent knew who Gov. (Vernon) Thomson was.

"He had 50 per cent of the voters for him, and I had 30 per cent, and the other 20 per cent were 'undecided.'

"Lou Harris looked at me and said, 'Well, Gaylord, some races have been won from there.'

"I won it, with about 53 per cent of the vote in November."

"So any reputable, young, talented campaigner can be formidable, whether he is known in the state or not."

Laird's repeated statements that he will not be a candidate in Wisconsin next year clearly are welcomed by Nelson; he smiled when the names of Similarly, former Gov. Warren P. the two most frequently mentioned Republican prospects — State Sen. Gerald Lorge of Bear Creek and Milo Knutson of LaCrosse were mentioned.

Both would have to be considered unformidable foes, even under the Nelson dictum of taking no one for granted.

Knowles has announced that he is through with elective politics, but sources at the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee say that they are hearing reports with increasing frequency that his younger brother, State Senate President Robert P. Knowles of New Richmond, is interested in a race against Nelson.

Nelson said he feels that the GOP as a party has not been damaged by the Watergate affair stemming from president Nixon's separate re-election organization last year.

Voters have clearly differentiated between the Nixon operation and the Republican Party, said Nelson.

"The public is sophisticated enough to know that it wasn't the operation of the party or of party regulars."

"It was a bunch of outsiders. As a party it hasn't damaged them," Nelson stressed.

And there are strong signs indicating that Nelson feels that if voters are going to react against the string of scandals coming to light, the reaction may be aimed at incumbents, generally, rather than solely at Republicans. Nelson's moves to limit contributions to his own campaign organization are viewed in that context.

Nor does Nelson think the relative unfamiliarity of the possible GOP opponents ultimately hurts the chances of the Republicans to unseat him as he did to Alexander Wiley a dozen years ago:

"We didn't have anything in the way of candidates when I ran for governor either," he said of his 1958 victory over incumbent Republican Thomson

"I've had the experience of being at the bottom and going right to the top. If I can do it, anybody can."

Evidence of arson in fire at supper club

OSHKOSH — County detectives and a state fire marshal are investigating a blaze early Sunday that destroyed the Sarres Supper Club at 2605 Jackson Drive, on the city's north side.

The investigation was launched when firemen discovered evidence of a possible break-in and arson.

The chief fire officer in charge reported that there were two separate fires in the supper club. One started in the basement, the other on the main floor.

The major fire on the main floor began in an office and spread to the kitchen and bar areas. Heat was so intense that insulated windows in the barroom were cracked.

Firemen discovered further evidence that the fires might have been set. A back door that reportedly had been locked earlier was found open, and a basement door that was seldom used was found to have been forced open. Trim around the door was broken, and the door was scarred.

The fire was discovered shortly befor 1 a.m. by a man who arrived to clean the building. He went to the nearby home of the owner, Eva Sarres, who called the Oshkosh Fire Department. The town of Oshkosh department was called in later to assist.

Mrs. Sarres said she left the supper club at midnight, less than an hour before the fire was discovered, and everything was secure at that time.

"Many of the facilities are accessible to a degree but if people in general were aware of the need of handicapped individuals, maybe we could eliminate the barriers," said Geraldine Cooper, publicity chairman for the day.

The event is a part of the National Paraplegia Foundation's awareness week. Patricia Zeh is chairman of the local campaign.

The national foundation is a voluntary health agency concerned with the total problem of people who have sustained spinal cord injury or disease The local chapter deals more directly with the needs and problems in the Valley, making people aware of the situation in the district.

The mobility package in the legislature includes four bills. One would require all new public buildings and places of employment to include toilets and related facilities to meet the needs of the disabled.

Another would improve the curb ramping bill, modifying the ramp building standards to accomodate not only those with mobility problems but also with visual disabilities.

The third bill deals with major remodeling of public buildings to include alterations to make the facility accessible to those with physical disabilities.

The final bill provides for polling places in each ward, making them accessible to all wheelchairs.

nards are Green Bay natives.

Postal workers at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago Tuesday night reportedly found a note, apparently written by Barnard, telling of an abduction.

Barnard's mother had told The Post Crescent last Wednesday that early indications were her son had been abducted by "an escapee."

Mishawaka police today said that there had been two escapees from the South Bend jail, but both were captured and were not involved in the Barnard case.

Chicago police found Barnard's rented car at O'Hare Tuesday night. Mishawaka police confirmed a report that Barnard was alone when he rented the auto in South Bend Tuesday.

It is still unclear how Barnard was located Friday near Phoenix.

A Barnard family spokesman had said Barnard's captor forced him to fly to Phoenix Tuesday night. He said Barnard escaped in a mountainous region north of Phoenix and spent about 40 hours in the mountains before being found by authorities in a park.

He was given a medical checkup at a Phoenix hospital and then was released to his parents.

Earlier indications had been that Barnard was being taken to Colorado Springs, Colo., on a 6 p.m. Tuesday Continental Airlines flight from O'Hare. Police also had reported that he used his credit card to pay for the car rental and two airline tickets.

Mishawaka police today said they had no reason to believe ransom was sought. Barnard is the son of a Green Bay Realtor, Michael J. Barnard, and his wife is the daughter of William Payant, vice president of a Green Bay securities firm.

In a prepared statement, a Barnard family spokesman said Barnard was "abducted under a continuing threat to his wife."

Barnard's mother told a reporter last Wednesday that her daughter-in-law had been threatened and was in protective custody.

Mishawaka police said they knew nothing about the threats nor did they have Mrs. Barnard in protective custody at any time.

The family spokesman related, in the prepared statement, that Barnard "...was able to write a note on a paper towel in a rest room (at O'Hare) warning of the threat. Those portions of the note relating to the danger to his wife have not been released by the FBI and no further comments on the threats can be made at this time."

The spokesman said the abductor was not known to either the Barnard or Payant families.

School aid

ment of Public Instruction, warned Outagamie school administrators recently about the upcoming troubles. He said he couldn't detail the extent of the impact, but an example he provided suggested it could severely reduce aids.

The extent of the reduction would depend on the valuation gains and whether the guaranteed valuation figure is adjusted.

Two other factors also affect the level of state aids to schools — enrollment gains or losses and operating budget increases. When the enrollment rises, the number of children being divided into the total district valuation increases, causing a smaller valuation per child and a larger gap between valuation and guaranteed valuation.

State aids generally have been increased as the local tax contribution increases, thus rewarding large local effort.

Some schools are experiencing enrollment increases, but not the large increases of the late 1960s. And Appleton has lost students during the past three years.

The matter of the anticipated financial problem was brought up at the Cooperative Educational Services Agency No. 8 administrators meeting last week by Appleton District Administrator Orlyn Zieman. Other Outagamie administrators expressed concern, and Mark Stone, Little Chute superintendent and chairman of the legislative committee for the CESA administrators group, was urged to start the ball rolling on remedial action.

It was suggested that the county's state legislators be contacted. Also, Stone said he believed a meeting of administrators from Outagamie schools should be called when Kingston could explain the problem to all.

Stone said he didn't fully understand the potential repercussions, but intended to study the matter.

The series of events won't affect municipalities and counties in the same detrimental way because their aids aren't based on the guaranteed valuation formula but on an escalating system — the more paid in in local taxes, the more received back in aid, commonly called shared taxes.

Bus service ...

and will be welcomed when winter temperatures arrive not long from now.

The driver on No. 3 this morning was Carl Mertens, who has been with the nearly 50-year-old line since 1942, the most senior driver still on the job. He and some of his regular passengers called each other by name.

Riders on the 7:45 a.m. run included Mrs. Kuepper, her mother, Mrs. Doris Lundquist, widow of the line's founder; the mayor, Transit Commission Chairman Robert Bodoh and commissioners Art Diedrich and Thomas Headrick, Ald. Orval Polzin (3rd), and Mrs. Cynthia Johnson, president of the Appleton League of Women Voters, and league member Sue Kinde.

Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Kinde had set up a card table in the back of the bus with a coffee pot and tray of rolls and donuts. "We are welcoming the new buses to Appleton," they announced as they offered to serve passengers who boarded along the way.

There were five passengers besides the official delegation who boarded at the starting-point at College and Oneida. Two students rode to Fox Valley Lutheran High School and a young woman got off in a residential neighborhood. An elderly couple got off at Memorial Hospital.

Four women boarded on the northeast corner of the route at separate stops and rode to the downtown area. The riders apparently were all frequent users of bus service, questioning of most of them indicated.

Bus line and transit commission officers hope the newer buses and more frequent service will eventually attract more riders — those who stopped riding in 1972 when hourly service in mid-day was begun, and people who haven't been using the buses in the past.

But based on the experience of other bus lines throughout the country, they expect it to be a slow process. A passenger lost is hard to regain, transit experts say.

Today's "Bright Blue Monday" effort is seen as just the start of a continuing campaign for more riders, with shelters, bus stop signs, more intensive promotional activities and possibly changes in routes and reductions in fares being considered for the future.

A long winter for Aaron; Mets eye autumn classic

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The New York Mets will have to wait another day and Atlanta's Hank Aaron will have to wait another season. It was Never On Sunday for both baseball phenomena.

The Mets failed to win the National League East pennant after splitting a doubleheader with the Chicago Cubs and Aaron missed a chance to tie Babe Ruth's famous home run mark in a busy final Sunday.

"We're going to win this thing because we've got the pitching and the defense," said New York left fielder Cleon Jones after the Mets clinched at least a tie for the East flag with a 9-2 victory in Sunday's second game. The Mets lost the opener 1-0.

The Mets, once 12 games behind in last place this season, can win the elusive pennant today by beating the Cubs in one game of their makeup doubleheader. They're counting on ace Tom Seaver in the opener.

The second-place St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 3-1 on the last day of their regular season and moved within one game of the top

The third-place Pittsburgh Pirates also stayed alive, but just barely, with a 10-2 romp over the Montreal Expos. The Pirates also have a makeup date today, playing the San Diego Padres at home

While all this madness was going on, Aaron took some of the play away from the hottest pennant race in National League history

The Atlanta star, one shy of Ruth's monumental career home run total of 714, had four opportunities to match the record but didn't make it He singled three times in four appearancesas the Braves lost a 5-3 decision to the Houston Astros.

In the only other National League game, the San Francisco Giants beat the Cincinnati Reds 4-3.

Chicago won the opening game with the Mets on Ron Santo's run-producing single in the eighth inning with two out. In the second game, New York leftfielder Cleon Jones hit a two-run homer and made two outstanding catches.

Cardinals 3, Phillies 1

Bernie Carbo robbed Tommy Hutton of an extra-base hit in the fourth and then doubled in the deciding run in the bottom half of the inning to help St. Louis beat Philadelphia 3-1.

Pirates 10, Expos 2

Jim Rooker scattered nine hits and drove in three runs to lead Pittsburgh past Montreal 10-2 For the Pirates to win this pennant race, they'd have to win their game today and the Mets would have to lose their doubleheader. That would throw the whacky East Division into a three-way first-place tie between Pittsburgh, New York and St. Louis.

Astros 5, Braves 3

Cesar Cedeno hit a home run for Houston and the Astros scored their winning runs in the second on a run-scoring groundout by Helms and RBI single by pitcher Dave Roberts

Giants 4, Reds 3

Bobby Bonds knocked in three runs with a homer and single and Ron Bryant, with relief help from Elias Sosa, won his 24th game in San Francisco's 4-3 decision over the Cincinnati Reds.

Browns thwart Giants attack

CLEVELAND (AP)—"Deeeefense," the 76,000 Cleveland Browns fans repeatedly shouted and summed up the story of the Browns 12-10 National Football League defeat of the New York Giants Sunday.

"The defense did a great job in shutting them off in the second half," Browns' Coach Nick Skorich said. "We were hurt by interceptions and some dropped balls in the first half. A great defense made the difference."

The Giants' defense did its share of work in stopping the Browns, but allowed them to get close enough to the goal posts for Don Cockroft to kick the Browns to victory.

The Browns' offense was held scoreless in the first half, but Cockroft recorded three-pointers of 11, 27, 30 and 10 yards in the second half for all of his team's points.

"That's (defense) one of the things it takes to make a championship team," Browns' quarterback Mike Phipps said. "They (the defense) played like champions today."

Bob Babich, starting his first game at middle linebacker for the Browns, proved to be a positive addition to the defense. He was acquired two weeks before the season began from the San Diego Chargers.

"He sparks the defense," said defensive end Bob Briggs. "Babich makes the difference."

Babich praised the Browns' front four and discounted his single contribution.

"It takes 40 to win the championship," Babich said. "They (the front four) kept putting good pressure on (Norm) Snead. They had a good rush. That makes the job of the linebacker and everyone else easier."

The Giants held a 10-0 halftime lead on a Pete Gogolak field goal and a 20-yard touchdown pass play from Snead to tight end Bob Tucker

"Our offense stunk out the joint," Giants' Coach Alex Webster said. He added that "The Browns' defense is the best we've faced this season."

Giants' defensive end Jack Gregory said "When I came into this league I was told that if you can hold an opposing team to 17 points you should win."

The Giants, 1-1-1, played without their leading ground gainer, Ron Johnson who sat out the game because an already sore calf muscle knotted up on him in the pregame warmup session.

Packer offense has another off-day

By LEE REMMEL
Post-Crescent News Service

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — It was, in a word, highly inoffensive.

Better make that in-offensive.

Or, if you prefer, high de-fensive.

As Dan Devine succinctly put it, "When you play a game without a touchdown, it depends on how you look at it.

"I think both defensive teams played very well. I don't know how they feel about their offensive team, of course, but that's the way it looked to me."

It seemed an acceptable analysis of what had evolved under a benevolent September sun at Metropolitan Stadium Sunday afternoon, where Minnesota's Vikings ultimately prevailed, 11-3, in a toe-to-toe, throwback type of struggle which has become the hall mark of this crunching neighborhood rivalry.

But so was that of Bud Grant, stoic leader of the Purple People, who shot 1½ lengths ahead of the Packers in the NFC's Central Division with a perfect 3-0 record.

"You couldn't call it very artistic," said the imperturable one, "but it certainly was emotional. Neither team really played very well."

If Grant's appraisal was valid, the Packer offense was particularly inartistic, settling for a mere 160 net yards and sabotaging itself with two costly fumbles as well as a pair of missed field goals and untimely penalties.

Its difficulties were traceable in part to an off-key debut by quarterback Jim Del Gaizo, making his first regular season start in the wake of week-long speculation over whether he would replace Scott Hunter after coming off the bench to effect a 13-13 tie with the Lions last week.

Ironically, it this time was Hunter who was summoned from the sidelines in the closing minutes when the Packer attack failed to prosper under Del Gaizo's guidance.

Plagued by erratic radar, with t hrows falling both short and wide of the mark, he was able to hit on only four of 14 attempts for 36 yards.

To his credit, the 26-year-old southpaw took full responsibility for the passing game's futility.

"I didn't throw well and I have no excuses," he said. "I think I had ample time to throw. It was my fault."

Devine, however, intimated Del Gaizo might have been the victim of circumstances.

"No, I don't think Jim was tight," he said. "I have the feeling if they had fumbled and given us a safety, as we did for them, and we had made a field goal shortly thereafter as the result of the safety, as they did, we would have won the game.

"The tings that won or lost the game had nothing to do with the quarterbacking.

"We had several very critical penalties, like the one that wiped out a 16-yard gain by John Brockington shortly before the half. In a game of field position like the one we were playing, those things are very important.

"Like the clipping penalty we had that voided another first down in the second quarter. And, of course, the two fumbles —one resulting in a safety and five points and the other in a field goal "

The latter, surprisingly, came off the hands of MacArthur Lane, who rarely is separated from the football.

"Somebody pulled it out on the first one," Lane somberly explained. "I don't know who it was, He just out-right pulled it out. They were trying to pull it out all day long

"The second one was a good hit — there was doubt about that."

Brockington, who fell on the first for an automatic safety to avert a Viking touchdown, reported, "I saw that thing bouncing around and I jumped on it. Too bad it was in the end zone."

That, unhappily, was the only time the Packer fullback was to find himself in scoring territory during a long and

Del Gaizo hopes to profit from 'lesson'

Post-Crescent News Service

BLOOMINGTON, Minn — A week ago, he had been a hero.

Today, he had left by request.

It was a swift and disconcerting reversal of the pro football fates for Jim Del Gaizo, but he accepted it with dignity—and a high degree of pragmatism.

"You can't run and hide," he said, reflecting on what had to be a disappointing debut as the Packers' starting quarterback, one marred by a 4-for-14 passing performance in an 11-3 loss to the Vikings here Sunday afternoon "You have to face it."

One week earlier, he had been hailed as 1973's Messiah by the exuberant faithful after taking over for Scott Hunter and escorting the Packers to a game-tying field goal against Detroit.

Sunday, in a turnabout that was poetic but personally painful, he was relieved by Hunter in the closing minutes after failing to ignite the Green Bay offense

"I hope when I look at the film, I'll learn something positive," said Del Gaizo, who has been described as a superior student of the game.

"I know they taught me a lesson out there today. I hope it helped me to become a better quarterback, but only the future can determine that."

Asked if he had discussed the Vikings' defensive approach with Hunter, he rejoined, "What is there to talk about? They only played two coverages the whole game. They don't do a lot of things, but what they do, they do well.

"They play good team defesne, but until I've seen the films I couldn't say that anyone was outstanding."

Coach Dan Devine, meanwhile, was being asked if Del Gaizo would contine to be his No. 1 quarterback.

"It's to close to the end of the game to say anything," he said, appending, "I don't like to go from week to week, but Minnesota won the division title doing it two years ago

"It's hard on the coach not to be sure who it's going to be, but you do whatever it takes to win."

Reminded that he had said that whoever started against the Vikings might well be his quarterback indefinitely, Devine replied, "I said probably, and I'll just hold on that statement."

Del Gaizo, aware that his position has to be a trifle tenuous at this point, conceded, "I don't know what the future holds for me, so it's useless to speculate."

Later, in a more philosophical mood, he noted, "It was my first (league) start. At least I got that one out of the way.

"I couldn't do any worse, right?"

Dr. Gibron cures Bears

DENVER (AP) —Dr. Abe Gibron had the cure for what ailed the Chicago Bears. His prescription was the same brawling, punishing football his Bears have always played, but with a seemingly unwilling opponent like the Denver Broncos

The result was a 33-14 Bear victory, their first of the season against two loses.

Chicago's intimidating style forced five Denver fumbles three of them by running back Floyd Little, and two interceptions, along with numberous costly penalties, mostly of the personal foul variety.

The Broncos were assessed 62 yards on eight penalties, with most of them nullifying sizeable gains The Bears had 12 penalties for 132 yards, but the majority came late in the game after the outcome was no longer in doubt

Denver's fumbling tendencies hrt, as the Bears turned Little's trio of mishandlings into a touchdown and two field goals. Cornerback Charlie Ford's interception of a Charley Johnson pass near the goalline thwarted the first Denver scoring threat early in the second period, and Denver didn't come close again until the final quarter, when it scored its two TDs

Running back Bobby Anderson, who caught 13 passes for 143 yards to tie a club mark for receptions in a game, hauled in 18- and 16-yard passes from Johnson before running over from the one for the Broncos' first score with 11 47 left in the period Six minutes later, Johnson dumped a screen pass to rookie Otis Armstrong, who sprinted 36 yards for the score.

Not that it really mattered. The Bears had rolled up a 30-0 lead on the strength of Bobby Dougiass' two touchdown passes, Jim Harrison's power running and four field goals.

Hadl has Rams clicking

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Los Angeles Ramy have found success with a new quarterback, and coach Dick Nolan of the San Francisco 49ers must be tempted today to try the same formula.

"Sometimes a change of quarterbacks helps a team," said John Hadl, after leading the Rams to a 40-20 victory over San Francisco Sunday. "It gets you out of a rut you might not have realized you were in."

The victory made the Rams 3-0 for the National Football League season and left them two games ahead of San Francisco, defending champions in the National Conference West.

Nolan was asked if he planned lineup changes for next Sunday when the 49ers, 1-2, will be Atlanta and he replied, "That's not out of the question."

One decision facing him is whether to stick with John Brodie, his starting quarterback the first three games. The 38-year-old veteran left Sunday's game listening to the booing of 49ers' fans after throwing his third interception of the day.

"They really whipped us, give them credit. They were damn good," said Brodie, who has given up four interceptions this year and has not thrown a touchdown pass.

Steve Spurrier replaced Brodie in the fourth quarter and passed for 62 yards on a drive that ended with a 20-yard touchbown pass to Ted Kwalick.

But the day already belonged to Hadl, the former San Diego Charger who leads NFL passers with his three-game statistics.

"He called another fine game for us," said Chuck Knox, the Rams' new coach.

Hadl's calls included a quarterback sneak on a fourth down at the Rams' 30-yard line, with the score tied 10-10 in the second period. He made the few inches needed and Los Angeles drove for the go-ahead touchdown.

"Hadl is really great to work with," said receiver Harold Jackson, who caught a 39-yard touchdown pass from the quarterback later in the second quarter.

Hadl completed 8 of 11 passes for 118 yards against the 49ers, giving him 28 completions in 36 attempts this season. He's totaled 359 yards and five touchdowns on his passing.

"Right now, I'm the best quarterback, I've ever been. I've bzen consistent and we haven't made any mistakes," said the passer who is enjoying an interception-free season so far.

Larry McCutcheon and Tony Baker, part of the Rams' rushing attack which totaled 223 yards, both got touchdowns running. Rookie Cullen Bryant scored on a 93-yard kickoff return and David Ray kicked four Los Angeles field goals.

Kasko ousted, Ralph Houk resigns

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press Sports Writer

The calendar gave the "You're out" sign to the American League baseball season.

The Boston management did the same to Red Sox Manager Eddie Kasko and Yankee Manager Ralph Houk took himself out of the old ballgame in New York.

Kasko, whose Boston Red Sox finished second, was fired Sunday while Houk, whose Yankees finally settled in fourth place, resigned.

Kasko and Houk joined Billy Martin, released by the third-place Detroit Tigers in early September, on the sidelines of the American League East.

"I'm doing this for one reason," said Houk after the Yankees dropped an 8-5 decision to the Tigers to close out a halfcentury at Yankee Stadium. "We've won some pennants here but its been a little rough since 1966. You can't work that long in one place with the feeling you haven't quite got there."

"I fully understand that when changes have to be made they start at this end," said Kasko, before the club he managed for four years beat Milwaukee 3-2. "I'm sorry only that we didn't win."

Elsewhere in the American League's final day of regular season baseball action, Chicago nipped Oakland 1-0 in 10 innings, California blanked Minnesota 3-0 and Texas shut out Kansas City 3-0.

Martin moved southwest when he was named manager of the Texas Rangers. Kasko remains with the Red Sox as a scout while Houk's baseball plans are uncertain.

It was a tough day all around for the Yankees, who will vacate Yankee Stadium for two years while it undergoes a $24 million modernization program.

A nostalgic crowd of 32,238 saw the Yankees rally for three runs in the seventh to take a 4-2 lead but the Tigers scored eight times in the eighth for the victory.

The Red Sox ended their season in better fashion. They got a victory and a new manager. No Yankee successor was named to Houk.

Darrell Johnson, a former Yankee catcher, was picked to manage the Red Sox next season.

The Red Sox finished their season with 89-73 marks after winning their season finale on a gift run.

Angels 3, Twins 0

Frank Tanana, a 20-year-old rookie, pitched a two-hitter, leading the California Angels to a 3-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Bob Oliver's double and sacrifice fly knocked in two runs for Tanana, 2-2, who struck out nine and walked one.

'Brock' won't go home in December

Post-Crescent News Service

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — John Brockington made a vow here Sunday.

Despite the depressing reality of an 11-3 defeat just suffered at Minnesota Viking hads, he insisted, "I'm not going home this December. There's no way I'm going home in December."

His meaning was clear, if unexpectedly optimistic at that juncture. He is determined that he and the Packers will be in another division playoff at that stage, regardless of the Vikings' current 1½-game bulge in the NFC's Central Division race.

The afternoon's unhappy outcome, he declared had just been a temporary setback.

"It was just one of those days," the two-time 1,000-yarder said. "A fumble gave them the safety and another fumble gave them a field goal. And they got an interception when were moving again.

"That's the way it was all day—like the holding penalt, when I got the first at thw start of the second half. That was a 31-yard play, because we lost my 16-yard gain and got set back 15 yards by the penalty. Right before the half we had another penalty that cost us a first down.

"You're always going to have games like that, when nother goes right. And you're going to have days when everything goes right.

"Just as long as they don't happen to often. A lot of us," he added wryly, "won't be around if it happens too much."

His next words quickly dismissed this unpleasant possibility. "We've got a good football team," he asserted. "We're young and we're still in it.

"Heck, last year the Vikings got off to their worst start ever. What did they lose, their first four in a row? And yet we had to beat 'em here to clinch the division championship. So we've got hope.

"They've got a great cushion now, no doubt about it. But it's not over yet."

Bradshaw 'steels' show

HOUSTON (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers lived up to their reputation as big play artists Sunday when they painted the Houston Oilers black and blue, 36-7 in the Astrodome.

The Oilers tried to upstage the Amzrican Football Conference Central Division leaders with two interceptions and a blocked field goal attempt for a 7-6 halftime lead.

Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini hit tight end Mack Alston for Houston's only scoring and Roy Gerela kicked field goals of 20 and 47 yards for the score at intermission.

But Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw rammed one yard for a touchdown and Steeler linebacker Andy Russell return an interception 45 yards for a touchdown to set the rout in motion.

Bradshaw hit Ron Franklin on a 26-yard scoring pass, Glen Edwards intercepted a Lynn Dickey pass and ran 86 yards for a touchdown and Gerelwoicked his third fielder, 26 yards, to put Houston to rest.

"This was their first game at home and it was a big psychological advantage for them," Bradshaw said. "We knew it would be a dogfight. I probably should have audibled more but we just stuck to our stuff."

John Charles and Willie Alexander each intercepted one of Bradshaw's aerials in the first half. Rookie defensive tackle John Matuszak blocked a field goal attempt and defensive end Elvin Bzthea dropped Bradshaw for losses of 13 and 10 on successive plays to highlight Houston's first half defensive performance.

In addition to the Steelers' interception derby, defensive end L. C. Greenwood contributed to Houston's woes with one quarterback drop for a 15 yard loss and a fumble recovery that set up Gerela's final field goal.

De la Torre garners first major victory

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Manuel de la Torre jumped into an early lead Sunday and then barely hung on to win the 17th U. S. National Senior Golf Classic for his first major victory in a 37-year career.

The 52-year-old de la Torre, a golf pro in Milwaukee, started the day four strokes back of third-round leader Nilan Marusic but Marusic had three bogeys in the first five holes.

Meanwhile, de la Torre had four pars and a birdie to take the lead.

His four-round scores of 74, 64, 71 and 69 and a total of 278, 10 under par, gave him a one-stroke edge on five-time defending champion Tommy Bolt, driving range owner Willie Barber, and Al Feldman of Auburn, Wash.

De la Torre, who came to this country when civil war broke out in his native Spain, had never before won a major tourney and his first prize of $7,500 was by far the largest he'd ever earned.

Packers . . .

frustrating afternoon, one which saw him yeild game rushing honors to the Vikings' rookie wonder, Chuck Foreman, who emerged with 89 yards in 16 attempts, six more than running mate Ed Marinaro. Brockington had to be content with 58 in 14 carries.

The Vikings' strangulation of the Packer attack was not, Devine assured, due to any departure in approach.

"They just played ver aggressively," he said. "They played a lot of 4-3, inside and outside, and some over and under. They didn't blitz as much as we thought they would.

"The secondary played off, as it usually does. They did a little mixing up of what the tackles and linebackers do. Against Oakland in their first game, they blitzed a lot, but against Chicago last week, they didn't. And they didn't do much blitzing today."

Two long passes in the first half, a surprising departure from tactical form, were not designed to open up the run for Brockington and Lane, he said.

"We hoped to complete them," Devine informed. "They were not designed to loosen up anybody. The first one on the opening play to Barry Smith would have been a circus catch, but he had his hand on it.

"We connected on two fly patterns against their defense in Green Bay last year. In other words, you go with what you think will work."

Devine admitted, in this assessment, that "Del Gaizo does need work to get down his timing with our receivers.

"How do I feel about his performance today? I'd rather wait and evaluate it a little later, after I have had a chance to look at the film.

"At this point, I admittedly could be critical of the quarterbacks. But in the game of this nature, you have to examine the fact that Fran Tarkenton, whom I think is a very fine quarterback, had one intercepted in the end zone. It's easy to be critical of quarterbacks."

In the Vikings' quarters, Tarkenton described this misadventure —the lone blot on a 12-for-16 passing record —as entirely accidental and unintentional.

"I was trying to throw it out of the park," he said, "but I was throwing on the run and I couldn't get enough on it. It was supposed to be a sideline pass to Marinaro, but he was covered."

Al matthews, whose opportune theft spared the Packers no less than a Fred Cox field goal at that late second quarter point, had a diametrically opposite objective.

"It was a scramble by Tarkenton, so I had to stay deep and play the ball," he explained. "The intended receiver wasn't close to catching it. It was just a matter of me getting possession of the ball before going out of bounds."

It was this kind of heroic which consistently kept the Packers a float (they also recovered three Viking fumbles), but the offense was just as consistently unable to take advantage, due in no small measure to the explosive depredations of Alan Page, a frequent and unwelcome visitor to the Green Bay backfield.

Even Chester Marcol was off target, missing field goal attempts from 34 and 37 yards although he did manage to connect from 42.

"I think all kickers go through this," Devine observed. "Fred Cox went through this a couple of years ago. I was in hopes Chester wouldn't. But the good ones come out of it and I'm sure he will."

Marcol, taking adversity in realistic stride, said, "Finally the bad day came. I sure hated to see it, but it came. The first one was tipped a little, but the last one I missed wasn't even close. I was really disappointed. I kicked it was inside, almost with my ankle —it was too much with the instep."

was the original reason for putting those things beside the tracks."

Konrath said state inspectors told him Sunday's derailment may have been caused by a railroad car which, carrying a 60-ton load, had collapsed, possibly because of routine stress that deteriorated the strength of the car's frame.

"Anything can happen, and you are just asking for trouble if you set up explosive conditions," the chief said.

Allenton had a single-story trackside depot wiped out in 1961 by a derailment.

While this eastern Wisconsin town cleaned up its railroad yard Sunday, a depot in Hudson in western Wisconsin was smashed when 15 cars of a Chicago & Northwestern freight train derailed Konrath estimated the community's railroad storage yard got away with $10,000 damage this time.

Ephraim sowed, others reaped grape harvest

CONCORD, Mass (AP) —An ancient vine beside a white clapboard cottage is loaded with clumps of green and purple grapes, as it has been every fall since Ephraim Bull developed the first strain of Concord grapes.

It all began when Bull — a gold-beater, one who pounds gold leaf into a thin sheet used for decorations — decided to improve on the fickle varieties of grapes being grown then.

He crossed a tough wild vine that grew behind his house with other grapes until in 1849 he came up with the strain he was looking for, a tart, early-ripening fruit that would withstand New England winters.

The Concord grape was introduced publicly in 1855. Within 25 years, it had spread across the United States and to Europe.

But while others grew wealthy cultivating the grapes, Bull was bitter. It had earned him little. Two later strains he developed, Esther and Rockwell, never caught on.

Bull died in 1895, a poor man in Concord's Home for the Aged. His tombstone in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery reads, "He sowed; others reaped."

There's another memorial on a fence outside his old home, Grapevine Cottage on Lexington Road.

A plaque on the fence says, "Ephraim Wales Bull planted seeds of a wild Labrusca grape found growing on this hillside which after three generations through his work and wisdom became in this garden in September 1849 the Concord grape."

ICC not giving up on Penn Central line

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Interstate Commerce Commission today cautioned a federal judge against ordering a shutdown of the Penn Central Rail oad but offered no solution for the carrier's financial woes.

The comments were made in the ICC's long-awaited report, requested last July by U.S. District Court Judge John T. Fullam, who is overseeing Penn Central's reorganization under bankruptcy laws.

The commission said an abrupt shutdown of Penn Central "would have a severe economic effect on the people of the entire northeast sector of the country." In addition, the ICC said, the cessation would have a "ripple effect from coast to coast."

The ICC said it felt Penn Central could be restructured into a viable network railroad if external assistance is provided.

It said it will hold a series of further hearings to determine how much of the railroad's 20,000 miles of track should be utilized, whether such alternative service as trucks would be adequate for some communities, the condition of Penn Central plant and facilities, and the public's willingness to provide financial support.

The hearings also will study methods of reducing labor costs and increasing employe productivity as well as looking into the size of the labor force.

The ICC said Penn Central, aided by recently authorized freight rate increases and by the $40 million to $60 million annually in increased revenues from Amtrak, would be able to continue its operations through the first quarter of 1974 and probably through the remainder of 1974.

However, it urged Judge Fullam to allow the carrier to utilize $43 million held in escrow or the interest on those funds and to allow Penn Central to seek additional funds under the Emergency Rail Services Act of 1970.

It also indicated it felt Judge Fullam should develop a program for the management, development and disposition of Penn Central's real estate holdings.

The commission said none of the three plans proposed for reorganizing the Penn Central was sufficient.

Judge Fullam had asked the ICC to look into the three plans and to develop a program to permit continued running of the railroad without eroding Penn Central's financial position.

Otherwise, Judge Fullam said, he would have no choice but to order the railroad shut down. The Philadelphia judge has scheduled a hearing on the Penn Central reorganization for Oct. 12.

Ask free hunting, fishing at age 62

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Rep. Richard Matty, R-Crivitz, has asked the Assembly Natural Resources Committee to endorse bills that would grant free fishing and small-game hunting licenses to persons 62 years old and older.

Crivitz said a law which grants free licenses at age 65, should be rolled back because the federal law now allows retirement at 62.

Maryland contract system eyed

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel named a task force to study the awarding of state engineering and architectural consultant contracts without competitive bidding. The long-standing practice is at the root of a federal grand jury investigation of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and others for alleged kickbacks and bribes. The Democratic governor's office said the 11-member panel is to propose legislation to correct any abuses by Dec. 1. Agnew is a former Maryland governor and former Baltimore County executive.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) —The latest Gallup Poll indicates a growing majority of Americans think government funds should replace private contributions in financing presidential and congressional election campaigns. The poll taken Sept. 7-10 shows 65 per cent of those surveyed favor the government's appropriating a fixed amount for the campaigns. In a similar poll in early June, 58 per cent responded that way.

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) — A Democratic party committee drafting delegate-selection rules for the 1976 convention is sharply divided over ways to replace the quota system used last year. The committee, which met for three days, will try to resolve the split at more meetings next weekend.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A hearing session scheduled Tuesday by the Senate Watergate committee has been cancelled because two witnesses reportedly have refused to testify.

Agnew

could get at least nine months in jail.

"Ive heard it called the greatest speech of his career," said J. Marsh Thomson, Agnew's press secretary. "People are saying they felt it was time he stood up and defended himself."

Newsweek described Buzhardt's role as "essentially that of a go-between hoping to budget both parties from fixed positions."

A Justice Department spokesman declined comment on the Newsweek report. The White House, which last week said the presence of Nixon's lawyers at the meetings was purely "informational," also did not comment on the story.

In his remarks to the GOP leaders, Agnew denied that he and his lawyers had ever initiated plea bargaining. Although he did not deny that such meetings took place, he said a bargain such as has been reported never was under serious consideration.

Agnew was said by aides to be encouraged by the response to his Saturday speech.

While he spent a relaxed Sunday playing golf at the Palm Springs desert resort with pro Ken Venturi, his aides were beginning to assess reaction to the speech. But because it was a weekend, staff aides said they could not readily assess any impact.

Thomson said that, while Agnew had contemplated such a statement for some time, the decision to tack it on to his Los Angeles speech came only the night before.

Classes scheduled despite strike call by teachers Sunday

WHITEWATER, Wis. (AP) — School officials in Whitewater scheduled classes today, despite a strike called late Sunday night by the district's 135 teachers.

They said the late hour of the strike-call required that school be open for the area's 2,400 students, many of whom would presumably not have heard of the strike before reaching picket lines set up by teachers early today.

"We will have to meet tonight to evaluate remaining open after today," Superintendent Thane Uglow said. "Today we will use subs plus those that cross the picket lines."

Negotiations between the Whitewater Education Association and the school board broke off Thursday night, with the dispute centered on class size and teaching assignments.

A spokesman for teachers said a negotiating session was scheduled tonight, but Uglow said the school board might not attend.

Former White House appointments secretary Dwight L. Chapin and Florida Young Republican leader Robert M. Benz were to have been quizzed about campaign "dirty tricks." Donald H. Segretti, an admitted political saboteur, is to appear before the panel Wednesday.

VIENNA (AP) — Jewish refugees from the Soviet Union are continuing to arrive at the Schoenau transit camp despite the Austrian government's promise to close it. The government made the pledge in order to win the freedom of four hostages from two Arab terrorists who kidnaped them Friday.

TOKYO (AP) — Holidaying Chinese streamed through the streets of Peking, celebrating the 24th anniversary of the People's Republic of China. Peking newspapers reported abundant supplies in the markets and shops, and Japanese correspondents in Peking reported the Chinese government expectsgrain production this year to top the record crop of 250 million tons in 1971.

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The Cambodian military command reported recapture of the country's largest textile factory a mile west of Kompong Cham but said the Khmer Rouge insurgents almost destroyed it before they pulled out. Government forces at Kompong Cham, which is 47 miles northeast of Phnom Penh, now are trying to break through to a government force besieged at the airport, the last government position in the area under insurgent pressure.

Action against Nixon seen for Agnew probe

WASHINGTON (AP) —Impeachment proceedings conceivably could be taken against President Nixon in both the Watergate case and the investigation of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee says.

But Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., said any such action would await a final determination of both cases in the courts.

He was interviewed on the CBS television program "Face the Nation."

Should the President refuse, under court order, to turn over Watergate-related tape recordings, the removal proceedings could begin, Rodino said.

"I think that in the context of our precedents, in the context of how we developed and how the founding fathers have established that no man is above the law no matter what his office, there certainly would be a likelihood that that would initiate the kind of proceedings that would lead to impeachment," he said.

Should Agnew be convicted of political kickback allegations for which he is being investigated, Nixon would have a duty to see that the vice president is removed from office, Rodino said.

If Nixon failed in this duty, said Rodino, he might be subject to impeachment himself.

The congressman quoted James Madison as telling the first Congress in 1789 that "the President should have the power of removing from office. It will make him in a peculiar manner responsible for their conduct and subject him to impeachment himself if he suffers them to high crimes and misdemeanors against the United States or neglects to superintend their conduct so as to check their excesses."

Agnew said in Los Angeles Saturday he would not resign his office even if indicted. Rodino said he thought it was the vice president's "right to remain in office," since a possible "indictment is merely a going ahead of charges" and not a determination of guilt.

Stram 'kicks' after KC win

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs lead the American Football Conference's Western Division today, but Coach Hank Stram isn't exactly overwhelmed with joy.

Stram analyzed the Chiefs' 16-3 victory Sunday over the Oakland Raiders and was disturbed by the fact the bitter rivals from the West blocked or partially blocked two of Jan Stenerud's field goal attempts.

"It's sacriligious to have a great kicker and have him blocked," Stram said. "We're going to be working very, very hard on our blocking for our kicker this week."

Stram said he thinks the Chiefs "are reaching a level of performance. I like to think we're going to pick up the tempo and play better from here on out."

Stram said Kanas City's defense "established itself as super."

Oakland Coach John Madden agreed with Stram that the Chiefs' defense was "real tough. We were beaten by a good football team. I've heard the Chiefs were going down, but that's not true. They're No. 1 right now."

Madden said he didn't think the Raiders' upset of the world champion Miami Dolphins a week ago had anything to do with the outcome of Sunday's game.

"I really feel we were ready to play," Madden asserted. "We're played 12 quarters of football, and our offense hasn't scored a touchdown. We have to be more consistent to be a championship football team. We have to iron out our mistakes. None of these things are panic things. The season's only three weeks old."

Stram changed his game plan during the contest.

"When we ran well," he explained, "we didn't feel we had to take chances. The other factor was that not many realize how sore and tender Lenny Dawson's shoulder was. We really went into the game with the anticipation of throwing a lot."

Stenerud, who wiped out Oakland's 3-0 lead and put the Chiefs ahead with field goals of 47, 41 and 29 yards, had one attempt of 19 yards blocked by Bubba Smith early in the fourth quarter. Later in the period, a 42-yard try was tipped by Kelvin Korver at the line.

George Blanda, whose four field goals beat Miami, made good on one of two tries, a 21-yarder that gave the Raiders their lead midway through the second quarter.

Willie Lanier, a linebacker, got the Chiefs' touchdown. He intercepted Ken Stabler's pass with one minute, 52 seconds left and returned it 17 yards.

Rampaging Cowboys destroy Cardinals

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry isn't all that sure his Cowboys are as potent as they appeared in Sunday's 45-10 National Football League massacre of St. Louis.

But Landry thinks his team may be just like rookie tight end Billy Joe Dupree — getting better with each game.

Dupree, a 6-foot-4, 225-pound No. 1 draft choice from Michigan State, snared three touchdown passes and nearly had a fourth as the Cowboys bolted into first place in the National Conference East Sunday.

Dallas Quarterback Roger Staubach was superb, hitting 17 of 22 passes for 276 yards and two touchdowns. But it was a day for Dupree, who caught touchdown passes of eight, two, and one yard—his first NFL touchdowns.

"We really don't know how good we are at this point," said Landry of the Cowboys who own a 3-0 record.

He added "Our attitude is improved and we will get better as we go along. If we could win a couple, tough, close ones—than this bunch could really be strong at the end."

Dallas rolled up 31 first downs and 578 yards total offense—the second highest in the club's history in mauling the Cardinals, who are now 2-1.

Landry spoke with enthusiasm of his rookie prize DuPree, saying "He looks like he's 10-feet tall when he reaches up for a pass. He's the best target for a tight end in the league. As soon as he gets a little more experience, he'll really be something."

DuPree caught six passes for 74 yards. He just missed a fourth touchdown on a 26-yard pass from Staubach when he was knocked out-of bounds on the Cardinal one-yard line.

The performance earned him the game ball.

"That's the first game ball I've ever won in my life, even in college," DuPree said. "I guess that's tribute to my performance and I appreciate it."

It was a bleak day for the high-scoring Cardinals as quarterback Jim Hart was intercepted twice and had numerous passes dropped. "We have the offense that can explode against anyone... this was a good momentum type of game," said Staubach.

The Cowboys should find out what kind of momentum they have because they meet Washington in a showdown match on national television Monday night Oct. 8.

St. Louis Coach Don Coryell, who guided the Cardinals to an upset of the Redskins, has his own opinion of Dallas.

"They are a super team," Coryell said.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Quick Packer-Viking quotes:

Chester Marcol: "I'm just going to keep on doing what I think is right, keep on working. Nothing really drastic has happened. I think I had more misses at this time last year than I have now.

"I have confidence in Ron (Widby) as my holder and in the whole line. You can't get down on yourself or anybody. You just have to come back next week."

John Brockington: "I really don't care who the quarterback is, as long as we get that ball in the end zone—over that yellow line. I've got my own job to worry about. Both Scott Hunter and Jim Del Gaizo are good friends of mine, but I don't care if Mac Lane is back there at quarterback if we win."

Ron Widby: "My punt after the safety was just a poor kick. I guess I tried to kick it too hard. It was just a bad kick."

Jon Staggers: "The defensive man went over the top of me to get at Brock when I drew that holding penalty. I was trying to keep him from doing it and I had his foot under my right arm, but I wasn't really holding it."

Jim Carter: "I prefer to tackle a guy like Dave Osborn or Bill Brown to tackling that Chuck Foreman. He juggles around a lot. He helps them—he's a big threat."

Dan Devine: "I was wondering if Jim Del Gaizo was ready to play a game of this type. That was what led up to my decision. Actually, I guess I made it the latter part of last week. But that decision really wasn't much of a factor in the ball game."

Barry Smith: "I hate to even answer a question on that first long pass, because I don't want to sound at all critical, because I'm not. The ball was a little underthrown and I think I had the guy beat. But it's hard for a quarterback to get cranked up on the first play. I came back a little bit to try to knock it down so the defensive back wouldn't get it. It was just one of those things."

Devine again: "Jim Hill got a good smash in the nose (and possibly a slight concussion) that put him out of the game for a while, and Charlie Hall had a pinched nerve. But I don't see anything, really, that should keep anybody out of next Sunday's game against the Giants."

Brockington again: "The field was slippery. What did they do, water it? It was lippery all over."

Barry Smith again: "We just couldn't get it going. But they couldn't get it going either. It was frustrating, frustrating. But we're not beaten—we've got 11 games to go. It'll take a lot of guts, but we can do it."

Jurgensen sharp in debut

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sonny Jurgensen has made more comebacks than Frank Sinatra, Danny Murtaugh and Richard Nixon. He always seems to come back better than ever.

The 39-year-old Jurgensen returned as a starter for the Redskins Sunday for the first time since last Oct. 29, when he tore an achilles tendon. All he did was throw two touchdown passes to wide receiver Charley Taylor, and direct the Skins to a 28-7 National Football League victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

"I'm satisfied with my first outing," said Jurgenson, who has survived two shoulder operations and the Achilles surgery during his 17 year pro football career. "My statistics are not important. The big thing is I moved the ball well and I threw fairly well."

Jurgensen's statistics weren't bad reading. He completed 16 of 29 for 195 yards. He impressed Eagles' Coach Mike McCormack, who was an assistant at Washington until coming to Philadelphia as head coach this year.

Jurgensen was a surprise starter for the Redskins, who were upset last week by the St. Louis Cardinals.

McCormack said he wasn't surprised.

"I announced to the squad Thursday that Jurgensen and Duane Thomas would start. I was 50 per cent right. When George Allen talks you don't listen to what he says, but you listen for what George means."

Allen explained that the Redskins' running game has been slow getting started this season, and he felt Washington had to throw to beat the Eagles.

"I felt we had to throw to get the running game going, and Jurgensen is our best passer. We certainly needed some kind of lift after last week," Allen observed.

The game was much closer than the score. Washington led only 14-7 in the fourth period when linebacker Chris Hanburger intercepted a Gabriel pass and returned 45-yards to the Eagles' 19. Larry Brown carried six straight times, the last from the one for a touchdown. Ted Vactor added a final score on a 34-yard TD run of an interception.

Earlier, Jurgensen, presently ranked as the No. 1 all-time passer in the NFL, threw 23 yards to Taylor, whose seven receptions vaulted him into a tie for eighth place with Don Hutson on the all-time league receiving list with 488.

The Eagles came back in the second quarter to tie the score on an 80-yard bomb from Gabriel to Norm Bulaich. Washington moved in front again in the third period as Jurgensen climaxed a 65-yard drive with a 10-yard TD pass to Taylor in the end zone.

Colts score 'best win'

BALTIMORE (AP) —"It wasn't a very good win from a technical standpoint," noted Baltimore Coach Howard Schnellenberger, "but it was the best win because it was our first."

Schnellenberger would have been hard put to come up with a better description after the Colts squeaked past New Orleans 14-10 Sunday for their initial victory of the National Football League season.

Lydell Mitchell and Don McCauley each gained over 100 yards rushing, the first Baltimore backfield duo to accomplish the feat since Alan Ameche and Lenny Moore did it against Cleveland in 1956. And quarterback Bert Jones hit on his first five passes and tossed a four-yarder to Tom Mitchell for the game's opening touchdown.

Later, however, the rookie from LSU practically discarded the passing game after throwing four first-half interceptions. It was the second consecutive game in which Jones was picked off four times.

"The interceptions really haven't affected me," Jones said after throwing just two passes in the second half, both incompletions.

Jones also mentioned the ground assault of McCauley and Mitchell as a reason for the lack of an aerial attack, a point also picked up by Schnellenberger.

After capping a 86-yard opening drive with Jones' TD pass to Mitchell, the Colts quickly got on the board again following linebacker Stan White's recovery of a fumble at the Saints' 34.

Staying on the ground, Jones drove the Colts to the one where Don Nottingham scored standing up on a sweep of left end.

The Saints came back in the second period when quarterback Archie Manning, scrambling at the Baltimore 33, hit a diving Bob Newlands in the end zone, only the second six-pointer for the club, now 0-3, this season.

New Orleans pulled to within four points on a 17-yard field goal by Happy Feller midway through the final period.

Manning, who didn't throw his first pass until the second quarter, hit on 18 of 33 attempts for 257 yards. Jones was seven for 16 and 91 yards.

Mitchell, used sporadically in the first two games of the season, carried the ball 22 times and gained 133 yards. McCauley added 109 yards on 20 carries as the Colts rolled up 339 yards total offense.

Sooners end USC win streak

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Has Southern California's reign as king of college football come to an end? And if the Trojans are still No. 1, can Oklahoma, which tied them 7-7 Saturday night, be far behind?

Those are the big questions this week, but Coach Earle Bruce of Iowa State has still another puzzler: Did Arkansas have 12 men on the field when it scored the decisive touchdown in a 21-19 victory?

"They're not No. 1," said Oklahoma quarterback Steve Davis, whose two-yard touchdown run in the third period enabled the eighth-ranked Sooners to end Southern Cal's 14-game winning streak.

"We're just not very good," said Southern Cal coach John McKay. "I hate to say it. I thought if we held them to one touchdown we could win it. We didn't. We haven't been very good offensively all year and we finally played a good defensive team."

Iowa State, meanwhile, was wondering how Arkansas could line up in a wishbone formation, which requires three set backs, and still have a flanker in the slot when Mike Kirkland passed to Jack Ettinger for a third-period touchdown that gave the Razorbacks a 21-13 lead.

Mercury looks like O.J. to Pats

MIAMI (AP) — Everyone's starting to look like O.J. Simpson when they play New England, as Patriots' Coach Chuck Fairbanks found out in a 44-23 National Football League loss to Miami's Dolphins.

Mercury Morris took a cue from the record 250-yard effort of Buffalo's Simpson on Sept. 16 and gained 197 yards in only 15 carries Sunday. He scored on runs of 24, 70 and 35 yards on identical right end sweeps.

Simpson had used the same path for his gains.

"We don't have the strength on the edges to stop the sweeps," admitted Fairbanks, whose team is now 0-3 to Miami's 2-1 record in the American Conference's East Division. But the first-year boss refused to single out anyone for the defensive breakdown.

And Morris refused to take credit for the yardage.

"When the guys up front make up their minds they're going to blow somebody off the field, nobody can stop us," Morris said.

Dolphins Coach Don Shula said, "Morris had outstanding efforts. He made the right cuts. The offensive people did a great job of blocking for him and when he was in the secondary, he was thinking goal line all the way.

"The sweeps are something we've been doing and working on," Shula added. "The objective is to get Morris wide."

Morris' first two scoring romps led a 20-point second quarter outbreak which included Garo Yepremian's 40 and 36-yard field goals.

The Patriots had only a 36-yard field goal by Bill Bell to show for the first half as mistakes ruined three promising drives.

Sam Cunningham fumbled at Miami's two yard line and the Dolphins' Curtis Johnson recovered in the end zone, Bell had a 33-yard field goal blocked and quarterback Jim Plunkett drove the team to Miami's 15 only to have a pass intercepted by Dick Anderson at the five.

"I've never been associated with a team that did so many good things and have nothing to show for it," said dejected Fairbanks.

The roof caved in on the Patriots in the second half, but Fairbanks said, "I don't think we had a letdown. We just need something good to happen, a shot in the arm."

The Patriots cut the lead to 23-16 in the third quarter as John Tarver ran for a pair of two-yard touchdowns while Miami recorded only a 40-yard field goal by Yepremian.

But Morris made his 35-yard scoring jaunt on the third play of the fourth quarter and Griese followed up with a 14-yard touchdown pass to Paul Warfield. Plunkett threw a nine-yard touchdown pass to Reggie Rucker and Miami linebacker Nick Buoniconti ran a Tarver fumble 13 yards for a touchdown to complete scoring.

Moore loses cool, Boston gets gift run

BOSTON (AP) — The 1973 baseball season was history for the Boston Red Sox today with players scattering to their homes and many wondering what the future holds for them.

Manager Eddie Kasko became the first casualty before Sunday's 3-2 season windup victory over the Milwaukee Brewers. Kasko was fired as field boss, replaced by former Boston coach Darrell Johnson.

Kasko will remain with the organization as an executive scout. However, many of his players will be working for someone else before the 1974 season rolls along.

The victory over Milwaukee enabled the Red Sox to finish with an 89-73 record, compared with 85-70 in the strike-shortened 1972 campaign. However, Boston was a bridesmaid for the second year in a row, runnerup in the American League East.

Boston's winning run scored in the eighth inning after the Brewers' rookie catcher, Charlie Moore, threw the ball to left field in anger after a disputed call at the plate.

With Milwaukee ahead 2-1 on George Scott's 24th homer of the year, Tommy Harper and Danny Cater singled for Boston, then Harper tagged and scored on a short fly to right.

Moore thought Harper was out at the plate, and when his argument failed to convince the umpire, tossed the ball into the outfield, allowing Cater to score.

Brewer ace Jim Colborn, who had already become the club's first 20-game winner, saw his record fall to 20-12 with the season-ending loss.

Henson good after surgery on left knee

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State fullback Harold "Champ" Henson was listed in good condition Sunday after undergoing surgery at Riverside Methodist Hospital for torn ligaments of the left knee.

Henson suffered the injury Saturday in the first quarter of the Ohio State-Texas Christian football game in Ohio Stadium.

The 226-pound junior, who lead the nation in scoring last year with 120 points, will be out for the season, according to team physicians.

Dorothy Hensen hits 598

Dorothy Hensen smashed a 598 series in the Early Bird Couples at Super Bowl Sunday to highlight weekend couples bowling action.

Mrs. Hensen rolled games of 195, 211 and 192. Wendell Warnke posted 591.

Len Spreeman crashed a 265 game and 650 series in the NFL Couples at 41 Bowl. Spreeman opened his 265 game with a spare, rolled two strikes, spared in the fourth and then rolled seven straight strikes. Sue Liebergern had a 551 sereis.

Lee Ashauer jolted a 236-651 leader in the Super Bowl Dozen league. Gene Roscoe posted a 254 game, Ken Hoffman 230-624, Arlyn Pues 601, Jim Schultz 592, Mike Plamann 226-580 and Jerry Plamann 229.

Pacesetters in the League of Nations at Super Bowl were Terry Wegner with 226-232-649, John Bauman 231-627, Bea Albrecht 203-570, Louise Brockman 201-550 and Joan Schumacher 200-526.

Wesley Pfarr cracked a 247-641 and Viv Huisman a 211 game in the Nutty Couples at Hahn's Lanes.

Bengals' little guy makes good

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Essex Johnson, only 5 feet 9, claims he's sometimes hard to find among the pro football giants.

But the San Diego Chargers got a good look at the Cincinnati flash Sunday. From behind.

Johnson slipped behind San Diego defenders to catch two passes from Ken Anderson and raced to touchdowns of 78 and 38 yards. He also rushed for 121 yards in 21 carries, running his three-game total to 342 yards, as the Bengals beat the Chargers 20-13.

"He's our fastest man," said Cincinnati Coach Paul Brown, whose squad also includes former national collegiate sprint champion Isaac Curtis.

"He also has the ability to rise to the occasion," Brown said.

Johnson and rookie fullback Charles "Booby" Clark both rose to the occasion Sunday after John Unitas, who threw for 215 yards and passed the 40,000-yard mark for his career, brought the Chargers to within seven points with an eight-yard pass to Bob Thomas.

San Diego still had a chance with 6:51 to play, but Clark ground out two first downs for the Bengals, 2-1, and Johnson dashed 29 yards for a third, killing all but 47 seconds. Unitas' last desperate pass was then intercepted.

Clark, drafted No. 12 by the Bengals out of tiny BethuneCookman College, gained 83 yards in 22 tries.

The Chargers, 1-2, lost flanker Gary Garrison for three to four weeks with a dislocated shoulder, and lost the game on two costly defensive breakdowns.

On the 38-yard pass, cornerback Joe Beauchamp and linebacker Tim Rossovich collided. Safety Ron Smith said the 78-yard play in the first quarter was a combination of a defensive mixup and timely play calling.

"We called one defense when we should have called another, and they were in the right place at the right time," he said.

"We should have won," said the Chargers' Mike Garrett, who returned to the lineup after being benched last week and gained 79 yards in 21 carries.

"But we kept making mistakes—fum-

State leader in use of computers

By RICHARD A. EGGLESTON
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin probably leads the nation in the use of computers for drafting legislation, doing legal research and printing reports, a computer expert says.

Savings in time and money, and the ability to do things that otherwise would be impossible, are benefits reaped from the computer, Thomas Weiland of the Legislative Reference Bureau said.

The legislature alone has 32 typewriter terminals in the Capitol connected with the computer, Weiland said.

Proceedings go directly to the computer from clerks' desks during legislative sessions for transformation into printed pages of the legislature's daily journals, he said.

Weiland and other computer experts in state government report such accomplishments as —All Wisconsin statutes, which come in two volumes, are stored in the computer's magnetic memory bank and, for the first time next year, will be transformed directly into camera-ready pages and sent to the printer.

—Wisconsin's 1971 and 1973 official Blue Books were partially set into type by computer.

—The conference committee report on the state budget was in the hands of lawmakers this summer several days before it would have been had it not had the typesetting abilities and memory of the computer.

—Daily journals and weekly indexes of legislative proceedings are set by computer, ready for the cameras which produce plates for offset lithography printing presses.

The computer took time out from its work, helping bill draftsmen and printers this summer to find every reference to attorneys in state laws for Rep. Harout Sanasarian, D-Milwaukee.

Sanasarian was concerned that laws may frequently serve the legal profession's special interest. Computers told him there are 2,281 legal references to lawyers, and listed every one.

Elapsed time for the job? Twenty-two seconds.

The computer accomplished the job of getting the compromise state budget into the hands of lawmakers in record time by producing justified type rather than the typewriter-style that comes off a highspeed printer.

The justified version makes each space-saving line of print flush with borders, similar to the text of a book.

It allowed the document to be condensed to 176 pages, compared with the 485 pages it would have run if produced by the typewriter-like printer, William R. Shirey of the Department of Administration said.

That difference brought the job within the capacity of printers for one-day service, he said.

The typesetter which allowed the speedy service and the savings in paper, Shirey said, is probably the world's fastest, and carries a $175,000 price tag.

Setting the legislature's weekly index by computer has allowed the state to cut down on the white space that used to be used between bills to allow printers to insert a slug of lead when something new happened to the measure.

Because of wasted space, 691 bills took 408 pages of the index last year. This year, the same number of bills are listed in 159 pages, Shirey said.

Last session, a private printer set the type for the legislative journals and indexes for $5.95 per 1,000 ems units of type, while Shirey's office charges $3

There are about 1,600 ems on a page of the paperback-sized journals and indexes.

Computer technology also allows legislators to deceive their constituents.

Tucked away in a remote room in the Capitol, operators sitting at computer terminals produce thousands of personal letters to constituents. They simply type a name from a mailing list, then let the highspeed printer finish the letter.

Police & fire beat

Dale E. Geer, 37, 904 E. Nevada St., Oshkosh, was treated at St. Elizabeth Hospital for facial cuts and a swollen eye after a two-car accident in the 1200 block of S. Oneida Street about 10:45 p.m. Sunday.

Police said he was driving south on Oneida and struck the rear of a parked car, pushing the vehicle about 10 feet. The legally parked auto is owned by George G. Reichelt, 237 E. Taft Ave.

Betty J. Edler, 10, 140 E. Edgewood Drive, was treated at St. Elizabeth Hospital for a head injury and released after a car-truck accident at the intersection of Richmond Street and Northland Avenue about 12:10 p.m. Sunday.

She was riding in a pickup truck driven by her sister-in-law, Betty J. Edler, 22, 1030 1/2 W. Kamps Ave., which police said was moving north on Richmond when the car, driven by William C. Uhlenbrauck, 76, 1403 E. Fremont St., made a left turn into its path.

Damage was estimated at $200 after the Pacific Street gate at Riverside Cemetery apparently was struck by a car during the weekend.

Police said the vehicle must have been traveling east on Pacific when it missed the turn onto Owaissa Street and struck the gate.

Wayne J. Pellett, 121 E. Florida Ave., reported the theft of a $55 archery bow and four hunting arrows from his car while it was parked at St. Joseph's School during the weekend.

Police said entry was gained through the driver's side window.

No damage estimate was given after a 6- by 11-foot front window was reported kicked in during the weekend at Rueckl Studios, 215 E. College Ave.

BLACK CREEK —Leslie R. Goodwin, 39, 105 W. Forest St., Black Creek, was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital in Appleton for treatment of a broken ankle after his truck left the roadway, entered a ditch and then crossed back over the pavement into another ditch on State 47, one-half mile north of Stingle Road early Sunday.

SHIOCTON — Roger M. Haase, 20, route 1, Shiocton was taken by the Shiocton-Bovina rescue squad to New London Community Hospital for treatment of head and mouth cuts he received in a single-car accident at the intersection of State 76 and Koepke Road about 5 p.m. Friday.

Police said Haase was traveling north on 76 when his auto went out of control after striking the road shoulder. The vehicle crossed over the center line, left the pavement and entered a ditch.

John A. Marzion, 34, 800 Fern Meadow Drive, received a forehead bump in a two-car accident at the intersection of Outagamie County Trunk E and the southbound exit ramp of U.S. 41, Town of Grand Chute, about 7:45 p.m. Friday.

Police said Marzion's auto was northbound on E when the second car, driven by Leon E. Jensen, 35, 2500 Crestview Drive, made a left turn from the exit ramp into its path.

Mrs. Meir denounces camp move

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Premier Golda Meir said today the Austrian decision to close the Schoenau transit camp for Soviet Jews was "a great victory" for Arab terrorism. She appealed to the Austrian government to reconsider.

Mrs. Meir discarded the speech she had prepared for the parliamentary assembly of the Council of Europe and spoke almost exclusively of the dangers of Austria's "surrender to terrorism."

Mrs. Meir is flying to Vienna tonight to appeal personally to Chancellor Bruno Kreisky to retract his promise to Arab terrorists to shut down the Schoenau transit camp for Soviet Jews emigrating to Israel, reliable sources in Tel Aviv reported.

Mrs. Meir said the Austrian government's decision "will be regarded as a great victory throughout the terrorist organizations and the radio stations of the Arab world —and rightly so, because this is the first time a government has come to an agreement of this sort.

"Until now ... terrorists often found themselves free to go through the same operation all over again, but now something much more has happened. The very principle of the freedom of movement of people has been put under a question mark.

"The four hostages taken in Vienna are alive and free, but I am convinced that —without this being the intention of the Austrian government and its prime minister —what has happened in Vienna is the greatest encouragement to terror throughout the world."

Mrs. Meir delivered her impromptu speech without notes, telling the members of the parliaments of the 17 nations in the Council of Europe:

I wrote a speech, but I decided at the last moment not to place between you and me the paper on which that speech was written, especially in view of what happened in Vienna a few days ago. Actually, what happened in Vienna highlights the position of the Jewish people and the position of Israel among its neighbors."

She appealed to the European parliamentarians to help her win a reversal of the Austrian decision, adding:

"I bring you a problem. If you wish, you can say, 'It is not ours.' But forgive me for saying that there is no such thing in the world any more where the problem of one people can be exclusively the problem of that people."

In Beirut, Lebanon, the Palestinian guerrilla group that carried out the Austrian operation threatened terror reprisals against Austrians if the Vienna government goes back on its pledge to shut down the camp.

A statement from the Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution published in the proguerrilla Lebanese newspaper Al Moharrer said:

"Any backing down on the Austrian government pledge would not serve the interests and stability of Austria or the safety of its citizens."

The three Soviet Jews kidnaped by the terrorists Friday to win Kreisky's pledge arrived in Israel, meanwhile, to an emotional welcome from relatives and officials of the Jewish Agency.

"I am very pleased to be with you in our beloved country," said Moshe Litvak, a 71-year-old pensioner who was held hostage 15 hours. "We had a very hard journey and I am very tired."

Litvak, his wife Barisha and the third hostage, David Czaplik, 26, were among a large group of immigrants arriving in Tel Aviv from Vienna.

About 2,650 immigrating Soviet Jews a month have been passing through the Schoenau camp 70 miles south of Vienna in the two years since the Soviet Union relaxed emigration restrictions.

Reports from Vienna said the flow was continuing.

Allenton may be exhausting survival odds

ALLENTON, Wis. (AP) — Many residents of this railroad town preferred to be elsewhere Sunday while firefighters dampened the fuse to a fuel tank which Allen Konrath says could wipe out half the community.

Konrath, fire chief for the hamlet of 650 persons, said Allenton feels as though it is exhausting its survival odds during bouts with train derailments and fluid explosives.

The town, staddling a Soo Line roadbed, was evacuated in 1969 when several tank cars containing liquid petroleum gas derailed. One exploded, but the blast force was vertical, sending flames 425 feet skyward without damaging the community, he said.

Sunday, about two blocks north of the 1969 derailment site, 21 cars of a freight train derailed. Several of them smashed into a trackside fuel storage area, setting four 500gallon tanks of liquid petroleum gas afire.

More alarming, a 28,000-gallon storage tank was knocked eight inches askew on its saddle. It was not punctured, however, and Konrath said it could have wiped out "at least half of the village."

Konrath said there were 22 small tanks, one of which was still being allowed to burn Sunday night to exhaust its fuel.

While deputy sheriffs again advised residents to evacuate, Konrath's firemen used hoses to cool fire-heated tank metal and the fortunately unruptured big tank.

The explosive potential "could have cleared out the business area of our community," he said.

Many dwellings were emptied voluntarily, at least until occupants were convinced the fire hoses had matters under control.

"I think folks are a little more jumpy than they were in 1969," Konrath said. "One party told me it is like pushing your luck."

Reports of the number of persons who evacuated, at least for a few minutes, ranged to 300. Sgt. William Weiss of the sheriff's department said no one was ordered to move, and that evacuations were voluntary.

Weiss was driving a half mile from town when he saw a ball of fire over the buildings. He parked less than 100 yards from the 28,000-gallon tank, and was joined by other persons who felt secure behind Konrath's hoses.

But Konrath said Allenton is uneasy about the storage tank operation's nearness to the rails.

"We are trying to move it out," Konrath said. "A gasoline bulk plant used to be next door, but moved."

"Trucks are handling shipments now days," he said. "Very little of it seems to be coming in by rail anymore, which

High court now back in session

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court opened its 1973 term today with a five-minute ceremony that gave no hint of the constitutional questions awaiting its consideration.

Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson put in a brief appearance to introduce new Solicitor Gen. Robert H. Bork, the government's lawyer before the high court.

The brief official ceremony marked the end of the court's three-month recess.

In those three months, the Watergate scandal has produced a constitutional question of historic proportions that the Supreme Court will almost certainly be asked to resolve this term.

Regardless of how lower courts rule, the justices seem assured of having placed before them the dispute over President Nixon's White House tape recordings of conversations on Watergate.

A federal district judge in Washington has ordered production of the tapes for his private inspection to determine what, if anything, contained in them may be presented to a grand jury investigating the Watergate scandal.

Nixon, claiming producing the tapes would undermine the constitutional right of executive privilege, has brought the issue to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here. A decision is expected daily.

For the Supreme Court's part, 77 cases, about half the normal docket for a term, have already been selected for argument and decision.

This week the justices will spend their time examining applications for hering and review. Next week the court will start hearing oral arguments in the cases already selected.

Saigon claims 300 are killed

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government today reported more than 300 government and Communist casualties in a 24-hour weekend battle 40 miles northwest of Saigon.

It was biggest battle near the capital since the cease-fire last January.

The South Vietnamese military command said Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces attacked two infantry positions less than a mile apart Saturday on the road between Tay Ninh, a provincial capital near the Cambodian border, and Khiem Hanh, a district town.

Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, the command spokesman, said the two posts were manned by two under-strength battalions totaling about 500 men. But he said they beat back repeated attacks Saturday and Sunday and counted 183 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong bodies around their positions.

Government casualties were nine killed and more than 100 wounded or missing, the command said. One of the South Vietnamese battalions was said to have suffered more than 35 per cent casualties.

Hien said the Communist gunners concentrated a heavy barrage of mortar and rocket fire against one of the positions while launching repeated infantry assaults against the other.

The fighting reportedly began with a mortar attack at 3 p.m. Saturday and lasted until 3 p.m. Sunday.

The attacking force, estimated to total about 1,200 men, was identified as the 101st Independent Viet Cong Regiment plus a regional Viet Cong battalion, Hien said.

Biggest domestic spending bill before panel, with veto threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee takes up the biggest domestic spending bill today with an eventual veto by President Nixon in prospect.

The bill provides funds for the Health, Education and Welfare and Labor departments.

Nixon and Congress have staged a running battle over such legislation since he took office. Nixon has vetoed the bills five times and only been overridden once.

This year the President recommended $31.6 billion for the departments, but the House voted $32.8 billion.

The Senate committee, which is expected to act on the bill in a couple of sessions, will increase the figure if past experience is any guide.

Many Democratic senators have said that Nixon's budget included inadequate funds for the health, education and antipoverty programs.

Attention will be centered on committee actions in Congress this week.

Originally, the legislators hoped the 1973 session would end this month But now the leaders expect it to run well into November.

In floor action, the Senate planned to pass late today the $21-billion military procurement authorization bill requiring a 110,000-man cut in U.S. troops overseas.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Sunday the reduction is not likely to emerge intact from a conference with the House. "The House conferees don't look on it with much favor," he said.

"But I'm not discouraged at that. I anticipate some reductions will come out of this.

Floor debate also will begin during the day on the foreign economic aid bill authorizing $1.25 billion for the current year.

A mass transit operating subsidy measure is the only major legislation listed for debate this week in the House.

However, the House Ways and Means Committee begins closed-door work today on a Senate-passed bill to reform the private pension system.

On Wednesday, Ways and Means is to send to the House floor a sweeping foreign trade bill. Despite a plea from President Nixon, the panel is not expected to reverse its decision to include a provision denying trade concessions to Russia unless it eases its restrictive emigration policies.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., calls his Government Operations Committee into session today to begin writing a bill designed to give Congress greater control over the budget.

This had wide support early in the session but has become bogged down in controversy.

Meanwhile, the Senate Watergate committee canceled a hearing scheduled for Tuesday after former White House appointments secretary Dwight L. Chapin and another witness reportedly refused to testify.

The committee now is scheduled to resume hearings Wednesday with an appearance by Donald H. Segretti, a confessed political saboteur for President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

No one noticed they died

MIAMI (AP) — Volton Jordan and Clarence Brinson were critically ill, homeless and penniless. They died sitting in wheelchairs in a hospital emergency ward, and no one noticed for hours.

Hospital officials said both men had been dead for several hours before someone noticed them slumped over in their wheelchairs this past week.

Brinson and Jordan, like many other destitute and elderly people, had been brought to the busy corridors of Jackson Memorial Hospital to wait until nursing home space could be found.

"There is no dignity for these people," a Jackson Hospital administrator said. "They are a forgotten breed. They have no place to go. This is their home until they find a place."

Officials said Brinson, 54, had been waiting three days in the hospital. Jordan, 60, had been sitting in his wheelchair for two days. A medical examiner said Jordan died last Friday of heart disease, with other complications. He said Brinson died last Tuesday of chronic pulmonary disease.

Ten patients like Brinson and Jordan were waiting at the hospital Sunday.

They are indigent elderly, dependent upon public money. They are put in wheelchairs in the hospital's emergency ward, brought there from private homes and residential hotels to wait for admittance to nursing homes that will accept welfare patients.

Officials say that process normally takes two or three days. It can be longer. The patients sit and wait until a home is found.

"We consider them boarders rather than patients," hospital spokesman Bill Keck said of the welfare patients. "They are in wheelchairs because we have no beds to admit them.

"Nurses and nurse assistants feed them three times a day and care for any other needs that boarders may request."

Keck said he knew of no other cases like Brinson and Jordan in which patients had died in their wheelchairs and gone unnoticed for several hours.

Officials say finding nursing home beds for the indigent is becoming more difficult because many homes say they can't afford to keep patients for the $13.50 a day the county pays them.

They said the 10 patients who were waiting Sunday for a nursing home bed is about the average number of welfare "boarders" at the hospital. Earlier this year it was worse.

At one time about 30 "boarders" were stacked up in the waiting room. That problem was solved when the county raised from $11.50 to $13.50 the daily allowance it would pay nursing homes to take the patients.

"It's the same all over in every big city," a hospital administrator said. "It's a state problem, a national problem. I just don't know what it takes to get the public to start caring."

Nine perish, N.J. officials think arson

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — "It was the kind of screaming that makes you sick . . . A man kept yelling, 'I'm over here! My babies! My babies!'," said a woman who lives around the corner from a fire that killed at least nine persons.

Firemen were to resume searching today in the rubble of four burned-out tenements for the bodies of three persons missing since Saturday's fire. Fire officials suspected arson.

Authorities identified five of the victims as sisters Patricia Requera, 18, Jacqueline, 15, and Carole, 17; Francisca Lopez, 52, and her 55-year-old husband, Carlos.

Police said the other four bodies were too charred for positive identification.

Man lucky to be alive

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A West Bend man was described as "very fortunate to be alive" after his pickup truck was slammed by a 98-car train and dragged 400 feet.

Jesse Ward, 44, was traveling west on a suburban Town of Lisbon road Friday when he came to a Soo Line Railroad crossing, marked by a sign in the fully area, Waukesha Sheriff's Deputy Howard Baker said.

He started across, apparently not seeing the oncoming train which was traveling about 20 miles per hour. It struck the passenger side of his truck, impaling it on the front of the train, wrapped around the engine. It took 400 feet before the train could stop.

Ward had to be pried out of the vehicle by sheriff's deputies.

"I can't understand it," Baker said. "There was one little cut on the side of his nose. I thought he was all done."

He at first refused hospitalization but later was taken to Columbia Hospital in Milwaukee where he was listed in satisfactory condition. His wife said he had complained of a headache, chest pains and double vision.

Agnew 'ruined,' but he'll keep swinging

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has said privately that he believes his political career has been destroyed. But he has come out swinging publicly at his accusers, determined to prove his innocence.

Aides said Agnew told a private weekend meeting of California Republican officials that even if he is exonerated of allegations of corruption, his political future has been destroyed.

Agnew spoke to the Republican officials Saturday after dramatically declaring war on his accusers in a nationally televised speech to a Republican women's convention in Los Angeles.

In that fiery address, a clearly angry Agnew said he would not resign if indicted, that he was being framed by persons in Maryland because he would not stop investigations against them and that someone high in the Justice Department was out to get him to make up for bungling the Watergate investigation.

Afterward, Agnew is said to have told the California party leaders there would remain "lingering doubts" in the minds of many people even if his name is cleared. He made it clear that he does expect to be cleared of allegations of wrongdoing.

Agnew's pessimism was not shared by the convention delegates, and it was said that the California GOP leaders also believe his future is not ruined.

It remained to be seen whether Agnew's view of the future would be changed by the tumultuous outpouring of support he received after Saturday's address, in which he again declared his innocence.

A federal grand jury in Baltimore is looking into alleged kickbacks to politicians by contractors in Maryland, where Agnew was formerly a county executive and governor.

In another development, Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel announced today the creation of an 11-member task force to study the state's long-standing practice of awarding engineering and architectural consultants' contracts without competitive bidding.

It is allegations that contractors made kickbacks in return for those contracts that led to the grand jury's indictment of Dale Anderson, the current Baltimore County executive. Presentation to the grand jury of allegations against Agnew began last week, although Agnew's attorneys have filed motions to stop the probe.

In his Saturday speech, the vice president said the allegations against him were a frameup by persons seeking revenge because he refused to use his office to halt the federal inquiry into the activities of others in Maryland.

Some "small and fearful men" giving evidence against him have perjured themselves, Agnew asserted. He said he had never violated his public trust in any office.

Agnew also renewed more sharply than ever his charge that senior officials in the Justice Department were trying to destroy him politically to salvage reputations soiled by failure in Watergate and other criminal proceedings.

In a statement after the speech, Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson said he would "remain committed to the standards of conduct and fairness which Americans have long cherished and which our legal system is intended to protect."

Meanwhile, Newsweek magazine reported Sunday that a team of Nixon's own lawyers tried to work out a deal between the Justice Department and Agnew's lawyers.

The magazine said the Nixon team, headed by J. Fred Buzhardt, made the effort in meetings and telephone conversations last week.

Newsweek quoted a Justice Department official as saying that the Nixon team was seeking a deal starting from the department's "bottom-line requirement" that Agnew resign and plead guilty to a charge for which he

Soviet supersonic bombers sent to Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has sent supersonic bombers to Iraq for the first time in a move Pentagon officials believe could affect the power balance in the oil-rich Persian Gulf area.

Most Pentagon analysts predict the Russians will turn over a small number of TU22 blinder bombers to the Iraqis, although there is some opinion that the Soviets flew there on an exercise.

The Blinder, which can fly missions at about 1,000 miles an hour, is twice as fast and far more advanced than bombers the Russians previously gave any Arab air force.

Until now, the Soviets have concentrated on fighter planes for the Arabs.

Israelis probably will be worried about this new bomber development, but U.S. authorities appear to be focusing their concern on the Persian Gulf implications because of the energy crisis.

The first indication that the Russians had made the recent move came in a talk by Deputy Secretary of Defense William P. Clements last Friday, during hich he stressed the importance of the Persian Gulf's vast oil reserves.

Clements told a small group of civic leaders that the Russians had "put He did not identify the planes, nor elaborate. Other Pentagon officials supplied details.

Some officials suggested the Russians might be using the bomber move as a go-slow signal to Iran, which is spending billions of dollars on modern arms bought principally from the United States and Britain.

Iran, a long-time U.S. ally, and Iraq, a Soviet client, have been rivals for a long time. That rivalry has taken on new importance in the broader western-Communist maneuvering for influence in the Persian Gulf-Indian Ocean region since Britain pulled out its forces a few years ago.

This would not be the first Russian action that could be interpreted as a warning to Iran.

American intelligence sources have reported at least 20 flights by very fast Soviet MIG25 Foxbat reconnaissance planes over Iranian territory this year.

Ironically, the overflights may have increased Iran's interest in buying even more sophisticated planes, such as the advanced F14 and F15 fighters being developed by the U.S. Navy and Air Force.

And the appearance of supersonic bombers in Iraq may serve to push the Shah of Iran even closer to buying the costly fighters, officials say.

Ex-convict being sought in kidnaping

DURAND, Wis. (AP) — An ex-convict was named in a kidnap warrant Sunday concerning the abduction of a Pepin County deputy sheriff.

Authorities throughout the state were seeking James R. Brant, 29, a former resident of Buffalo County.

Sheriff Roger Britton of Pepin County said Deputy Sheriff William E. Mountin was forced at gunpoint Saturday night to drive to Dodge County in central Wisconsin where another motorist, Mark Malak, 19, of Beaver Dam, was forced with Mountin to drive to West Bend in eastern Wisconsin.

Mountin, his patrol car having been abandoned in a corn field, and Malak were freed unharmed, author ties said.

The abductor vanished with Malak's car, carrying two pistols including Mountin's service revolver.

Britton said Mountin had been abducted while investigating a car found wrecked beside a Pepin County road.

He said it had been reported stolen in Milwaukee, and was thought to have been the car in which two hitchhikers were forced at gunpoint to accompany an abductor on a tavern-hopping spree into Minnesota.

Soviets expect good harvest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is predicting a record grain harvest in the Soviet Union this year despite heavy rains that caused crop damage in some areas.

The department estimated the Soviet Union's gross grain crop at 195 million metric tons, which would exceed the previous record of 186.8 million in 1970.

The report, published in this week's issue of "Foreign Agriculture" magazine, released Sunday, said the crop — including wheat, rye, oats, barley and corn — would come close to the level planned by Russia of 197.4 million tons.

Heavy rains have produced some crop losses and reduction in grain quality in the European area of the Soviet Union. Also, the report said, excessive rain in the Siberia-Kazakhstan regions last month occurred while "significant amounts of unharvested grain" remained in the fields.

The report said the Ukraine — Russia's breadbasket — has reportedly produced 45 million tons of grain this year, well above the 40 million set by the government as the 1973 goal.

Searchers find missing airliner

FLORENCE, Wis. (AP) — Bodies of six Michigan victims were found by persistent searchers Sunday in the wreckage of a private airplane which crashed Sept. 21 during a rain storm.

"The wreck was concealed from search airplanes by dense woods, and might never have been found if it hadn't been for the volunteer foot patrols who refused to quit," Sheriff Jake Neuens said.

Forested areas along the Wisconsin-Upper Michigan border near Florence and Crystal Falls, Mich., had been combed since the disappearance of the twin-engine airplane on a flight from Michigan's Lower Peninsula.

The sheriff said he was convinced the plane could be found in northern Florence County because a motorist, the last person known to have seen the plane, had spotted it at treetop level east of Florence about the time it vanished.

The plane's occupants were from Highland in Oakland County, Mich.

They were pilot Joseph Neu, 57; his wife; their daughter, Dorothy; her husband, Jim Parks; and two Parks children, agged 9 and 2.

The wreckage was discovered by a search party of approximately 30 volunteers and law enforcement officials, the sheriff said, calling the group "a determined bunch of guys who would not quit."

He estimated his county had contributed 250 volunteers for earlier stages of an interstate, multicounty search.

He said the wreckage was in a generally level, heavily wooded, virtually roadless area.

The pilot had radioed for advice in landing at Iron County Airport near Crystal Falls, Mich., north of Florence, but had given no indication of distress, the sheriff said.

Persistent searchers find plane

MENA, Ark. (AP) — The wreckage of an airliner missing since last Thursday was found Sunday night on a southwest Arkansas mountainside nearly 100 miles off the course of a 75-mile flight.

Eight unidentified bodies were recovered Sunday night from the wreckage of the Texas International Convair turboprop. No survivors were found from the plane which carried eight passengers and a crew of three on its scheduled flight from El Dorado, Ark., to nearby Texarkana, Ark.

Darkness and terrain too rugged for helicopters to land hampered search efforts. The area was sealed off, and search efforts were suspended until daybreak, with three persons still unaccounted for.

The area in which the plane crashed has been described as dangerous for aircraft. Mountains rise suddenly out of 1,000-foot hills to a height of 2,800 feet.

The wreckage was spotted by a student pilot shortly before dusk on North Fork Mountain, which is about 14 miles northwest of Mena.

Edward Dreifus of the National Transportation Safety Board said the bodies recovered by paramedics who were lowered to the crash site could not be immediately identified. Three of those aboard were colonels assigned to the Red River Army Depot at Texarkana, Tex.

For three days the search for the missing plane had centered in south Arkansas along the 75-mile line the scheduled flight was to have taken. Airline spokesman Jim O'Donnell had no comment when asked why the plane had gone 100 miles off course, but authorities had earlier speculated it might have done so to avoid a storm.

Forrest Ogden, a newsman who flew over the crash site before rescue units arrived, said he saw no signs of life. He said the airliner had crashed into the east edge of Black Fork Mountain, a peak of about 2,500 feet, knocking down several trees. "This terrain is extremely rough," Ogden said. "The tree cover is extremely thick."

Ogden said the search had moved into the Mena area only after a truck driver read about the plane crash and reported that he had seen a fire on Black Fork Mountain Thursday night.

The Convair left El Dorado at 8:20 p.m. Thursday night on a 20-minute flight to Texarkana. Between the two Arkansas cities it encountered a violent thunderstorm. The plane was reported missing by the airline shortly before midnight, about an hour after it would have exhausted its fuel supply.

Clock turned back at Weyauwega

BY MICKEY PASCHKE
Post-Crescent correspondent

WEYAUWEGA — The clock turned back here this weekend during the 13th annual Horse and Buggy Days. Buggy rides, parades, beer garden dances and antique displays added up to a successful celebration.

Costumed young and old roamed the streets to add color to the festivities. Top hats and tails, plumed hats and beaded capes were admired by the city's visitors.

A children's parade preceded the main event. Children dressed in old time garb pushed antique buggies with old dolls, little boys were clad in knickers, dogs rode in a variety of conveyances and a burlap horse sporting a sprightly lady bug carried the notation, "I'm a horse and a little 'buggy,' too."

Winners in the children's parade were: best horse and buggy day costume, the Larsen family: Cathy, Tom, Mary, Kris and Betsy; best pet entry, Laura Hofferber and dog; best decorated vehicle, Ronny Paulick; best float, "School Days," Betty and Michael Hirte, Harvey and Kevin Zeinert, Kay and Michael Hidde and judge's favorite, a train, Tresa and Daniel Popple.

Forty-five antique cars reminded spectators of rumble seats and box trunks. The oldest model, a 1914 Model T Ford, was driven by Jerry Reek.

The mainliner parade featured the six-horse hitch of champion Clydesdales driven by Erich Struck.

Antique machinery rumbled down the street. A 1913 Case tractor pulled an old lumber wagon and an old-time Allis-Chalmers tugged a culti-packer. A steam engine towed a classroom of singing students, the Paca Belles. An aged gasoline engine was rigged to pump water into a barrel as the ancient truck drove down Main Street.

A silage cutter from another era was hauled by an old Rumely oil pull tractor. The Willie Timm band of Clintonville blared old time marches from the top of a threshing machine which was drawn by a smoke belching steam engine.

Teams of Shetlands and gentle horses pulled a variety of wagons and rigs. Clowns livened up the crowd, riding up and down the street on under-sized cars, four-wheeled bikes, and other types of wheels. Floats, riding units, a tandem bike and three marching bands were included in the parade.

Prizes were awarded: comical, Tustin Fire Department Rescue Squad; best horse and buggy, Alvin Neuman; organization, Paca Belles; commercial, Erich Struck's team of Clydesdales; open class, Mid-State Distributors; 4-H floats, 1. Wolf River, 2. Lind Center, 3. Little River.

The whiskered gentlemen in town were judged for their beards in a variety of categories. Winners were: longest, Glen Wilcox; curliest, Samuel Hansen; blackest, Jerry Hildebrandt; grayest, Arine Tamos; best groomed, David Schmidt; most unusual, Curly Jansen.

Music filled the air for dancing Friday night, Saturday afternoon and night and Sunday afternoon in the beer tent.

The annual event was sponsored by the Weyauwega Chamber of Commerce.

Fun time!

Hope gone for school aid boost

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent staff writer

The visions of large increases of state aids that danced in the heads of public school administrators a few months ago have disappeared, as they realize the realities of cost-shifting and budget controls.

Most administrators will have to be content with the realization there is no state aid bonanza in the 1973-75 state budget, but in Outagamie County public school districts, there may an additional financial hangover to accompany the reality about aids.

The hangover could come from a series of expected events —or events already in motion —that could mean a severe drop in state aids to Outagamie schools in 1975. The net effect could be a drop in the amount of money available for calendar 1975 for city or joint school districts or 1974-75 for common or unified districts, or the necessity to increase local school taxes to pick up the aid slack.

The series of events and their impacts are:

—The shift next year to a current year valuation figure for determining state school aids —instead of the past year figure. With valuation rising about 5 to 10 per cent per year, this has the effect of doubling this rise.

A district's valuation is weighed against a state-established guaranteed valuation-behind-each-student figure for determining school aids. This guaranteed valuation will rise from $71,200 per student for 1974 to $74,800 per student for 1975. But actual county valuation will grow much more, closing the gap between it and the guaranteed level, and thus causing an aid reduction.

— The reassessment of Outagamie County in 1974 by the state will increase the value of property with school districts and have the effect of piling on valuation for formula aid purposes, thus reducing still more the gap between valuation and guaranteed valuation.

Outagamie hasn't been reassessed since 1966. It and Juneau County are the only two scheduled for the 1974 reassessment, as the State Department of Revenue carries on a continuous program of reassessing a few counties per year.

—The state budget-imposed control on the 1974 school budget, forcing districts to increase their operating budgets less than they feel is needed. They will be hard-pressed to make up this in the 1975 budgets.

—The state budget-imposed shift of the state share of teachers' retirement and Social Security premium payments to the local district. This is expected to cost Appleton an additional $1 million next year.

The budget controls and premium payment shifts were included in the 1973-75 budget which promised major aid increases for most schools. However, these aids will drop in 1975 below the 1974 level under the formula provided, even without considering the specific factors facing Outagamie schools.

Alan Kingston, of the State Department of Public Instruction, warned Outagamie school administrators recently about the upcoming troubles. He said he couldn't detail the extent of the impact, but an example he provided suggested it could severely reduce aids.

The extent of the reduction would depend on the valuation gains and whether the guaranteed valuation figure is adjusted.

Two other factors also affect the level

FBI keeps 'kidnaping' details under wraps

Conflicting statements and a news lid by the Federal Bureau of Investigation still muddy circumstances surrounding the disappearance and finding last week of a former Appleton man who was believed to have been abducted from his Indiana home.

Thomas J. Barnard, 23, a Notre Dame University graduate student, is back home in Mishawaka, Ind., according to police in that community who still doubt there was a kidnaping.

In response to a reporter's questions, a Mishawaka police official said the doubts are based on information gathered by his department and some of the findings of the FBI. He declined, however, to reveal those findings.

"It didn't seem like it panned out that there were two people involved," the official said.

FBI offices in Indianapolis and Phoenix, where Barnard was found Friday, have released almost nothing about the case and have not stated whether kidnaping was involved.

A spokesman in the Indianapolis FBI office said this morning that agents are still trying to determine if a federal crime was committed. Kidnaping is a federal offense.

The final word on whether Barnard was kidnaped will have to come from the FBI, Mishawaka police said today.

A police spokesman there said Barnard called the department over the weekend and asked if police wanted to talk to him. He was told they would, but probably not until after the FBI is through talking with him.

Police said they have not determined positively if there was a burglary at the Barnard home Tuesday, the day Barnard was reported missing. A determination probably will not be made until after police are able to talk with Barnard, the spokesman said.

Barnard's wife, Nancy, who taught at Roosevelt Junior High School in Appleton last year, reported the burglary when she returned home from her

Do-it-yourself probate begins in state today

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent staff writer

Do-it-yourself probate, commonly referred to as informal probate, went into effect today in Wisconsin. For any estate where the deceased died after midnight Sunday, informal probate may be attempted.

Primarily, do-it-yourself probate allows interested parties in an estate to handle their own probating, thus avoiding the expense of hiring an attorney, unless one of the parties contests the estate.

Also, the do-it-yourself probate involves a different procedure for probating an estate, with the newly created probate registrar playing the key role —a role similar to the one the probate judge played in the past.

Joyce Schumaker, Outagamie County register in probate for 15 years under Judge Urban P. Van Susteren, has been named by Van Susteren to also serve in the new position of probate registrar.

The Legislature adopted the probate reform measures last spring. Included in these was a measure for allowing the termination of joint tenancy (of spouses when one dies) without the full-fledged probate process, including the hiring of legal counsel. That went into effect last June.

The main thrust of the reforms was to eliminate the legal requirement of court action —and therefore, the hiring of an attorney — in settling most estates. While the executor of the will or no-will estate — now called the personal representative — formerly was generally inactive in handling the affairs of the estate, he or she now will be forced into performing the necessary actions.

Van Susteren said his court and probate registrar would cooperate in attempting to help people wade through the required paperwork in completing the probating of an estate. However, he said "we're not going to give counsel or advice on heavy matters."

Van Susteren was hesitant to predict how effective the do-it-yourself probate would work. He suggested there was considerable money involved, with lawyers' fees per year being from $600,000 to $750,000.

He expressed some doubts about its chances for success, at least in some cases. Without the attorney, the interested parties can be less sure of the completeness of the probate job done, plus they may not be aware of the full tax advantages of handling the estate in a certain manner.

However, Van Susteren added that if even one-tenth of the fees are saved, say $60,000 or $75,000 per year, then it probably was worthwhile.

Under the new probate law, the personal representative must contact the probate registrar with proof of death. Then, the personal representative must also prove his being accepted as personal representative, either through being named in the will as such or by approval by the interested parties through a written consent procedure.

When she is satisfied everything is in order, the probate registrar will issue "credentials" to the personal representative who then will handle the settlement of debts, payment of taxes and other matters. The personal representative then must file a final accounting with Miss Schmumaker.

Van Susteren said the estate matter would come into court, necessitating legal counsel, "only when there's a fight or an argument." And only the

Motorcyclist hurt in crash

CLINTONVILLE —A 30-year-old Milwaukee motorcyclist was injured in a traffic accident at 5:50 p.m. Sunday on U.S. 45, about five miles south of here in the Town of Bear Creek.

John M. Laatsch has possible leg fractures and was taken to the Clintonville emergency unit.

According to the Waupaca County traffic patrol investigating the accident, Laatsch was going south on 45 and passing a station wagon driven by Donald J. Fahrenkrug, 25, Appleton, also going south.

Fahrenkrug also pulled out to pass the vehicle in front of him, and the station wagon and motorcycle collided. The motorcycle went into the ditch and overturned.

Fahrenkrug was not injured and there was no damage to his station wagon. There was damage to the 1971 750 cc motorcycle.

Open house set for home in Clintonville

CLINTONVILLE — An open house is tentatively scheduled for the end of October of the newly constructed Viola Behling Memorial Home.

There has been a delay in getting the furniture for the home as the manufacturer can't get wood, according to C. Vincent Cassiani, Clintonville Community Hospital administrator.

The 28-bed building currently has three residents with another three persons expected to move in shortly. The home will not be functioning at full capacity until the state holds an inspection of the facility and issues a license.

The Behling Memorial Home was built with funds provided in the will of the late Miss Viola Behling. It will be operated as a retirement home, but will be licensed as a nursing home to provide care should any of the residents ever require it.

The $500,000 facility will employ a staff of seven nurses and nursing assistants.

Chilton man is area apprentice representative

MADISON — Robert G. Bishop of Chilton has been named state apprenticeship and training representative for the Fox Valley area by the state Department of Industry, Labor and Human Relations.

Bishop, 37, will supervise apprenticeship programs in Waupaca, Outagamie, Calumet, Winnebago and Waushara Counties. His office is at Fox Valley Technical Institute.

Bishop is an apprenticeship graduate and has been employed as a tool and diemaker at the Chilton Metal Products Co. in Chilton. He is a former president of the International Association of Machinists' Lodge at the company.

His duties will include regulation of apprenticeship programs to insure compliance with state regulations, development of new apprenticeship standards and programs, and coordination of the classroom portion of apprenticeship training with the area vocational school.

Bishop is one of 11 apprenticeship district representatives in the state. He will be paid $9,000 a year. He and his family live at route 1, Chilton.

Girl, 6, fatally injured at Marion

MARION — Six-year-old Holly A. Smith was fatally injured about 5:50 p.m. Sunday when she darted into the path of an auto and was struck on State 29, just east of Shawano County Trunk G.

The victim was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Smith, route 2.

Holly was playing with friends on a bridge that takes State 29 across the north branch of the Embarrass River when she moved into the path of an auto driven by Richard L. Roubal, 112 E. Garfield St. The Roubal vehicle was eastbound on State 29. Shawano County Coroner Douglas Knope ruled that the girl died of massive head injuries. Her death was the 10th traffic fatality of 1973 for the county.

Funeral arrangements are pending at Heier & Sievers Funeral Home.

Deaths of 13 persons in weekend accidents, several of them involving teen-agers, raised Wisconsin's 1973 road fatality figure to 838 today compared with 872 on the same date last year.

A two-car collision on U.S. 53 south of New Auburn left four persons dead late Saturday. They were identified as Ronald Knudson, 33, of Eau Claire; his stepson, Dwight Evans, 3; Wallace Wiesner, 18, of Birchwood, and Melvin Cooksey, 23, of Dallas, Tex.

Harlan Steindl Jr., 18, of Evansville died in a Madison hospital Sunday after his car stuck an embankment at a rural intersection.

Gertrude Smith, 61, and Victoria Reichert, 68, of West Allis were fatally injured at a Sauk County intersection in a crash involving their car, a camper truck and a teen-ager's car.

Kenneth Schafbuch, 17, of Mayville was killed Saturday when the car in which he was riding struck a tree near Horicon.

Russel J. Nayes, 23, of Eau Claire died Sunday when his car plunged off a highway ramp in Eau Claire.

Raymond Polaski, 60, of Brodhead died Saturday when his car overturned near Janesville.

Walter Schilling, 55, of Mosinee died Saturday in a Marathon County collision.

Rodney Winkel, 24, of Germantown died Saturday on Interstate 94 in Jefferson County.

Charles Jennings, 29, of Lyndon Station died Friday night.

Calumet County to lose township committeemen

CHILTON — The election of community committeemen for each town in Calumet County has been eliminated for 1974, according to an announcement received by the local ASCS office.

The State ASC Committee has determined that the county is too small to warrant the need for community committeemen. Therefore, Calumet County has been designated a one-community county.

Farms are getting larger, better travel and communication facilities with mail used extensively for ASCS business and changing programs which no longer require a large force of field employees to be recruited from elected community committeemen, have been given as some of the reasons for the reduction in number of communities in larger counties, thereby reducing the number of community committeemen to be elected. With the elimination of community committeemen in Calumet County voters will be electing members to the county committee directly by mail ballot, according to Armin Schwalenberg, executive director of the Calumet County ASCS.

Under the ASCS election procedure each farmer may personally participate in nominating farmers for membership on the committee. To nominate a farmer from the county it is necessary to obtain the signature of at least three eligible ASC voters in the county. Petition forms are being mailed to all farm owners and operators on record. Petitions must be delivered to the County ASCS Office not later than Oct. 29, Schwalenberg stated.

If four or more eligible candidates are nominated by proper petition, no further nominations will be made. If less than four are nominated by petition the present county committee will add the number needed. Ineligible nominees will be so notified and given 15 days in which to appeal.

Elected county committeemen are responsible for local administration of farm programs, Schwalenberg said.

The county ASC committee elections will be held Dec. 3,.

Nelson won't discount opponents

By TIM WYNGAARD
Special to the Post-Crescent

WASHINGTON — Gaylord Nelson says he isn't taking anything for granted.

The man who turned a Republican governor out of the statehouse and a Republican senator out of Congress says he doesn't consider himself a shoo-in with Wisconsin voters next year.

"I'm honest enough with myself to admit that I like being in this position a lot more than running against Mel Laird or Warren Knowles," he says of the difficulties the state Republican Party is having in finding a credible candidate to run against him in 1974.

But being placed on the bottom of the GOP's priority list for the next election by newly elected Republican Party Chairman David Sullivan hasn't influenced Nelson's planning. "I don't discount anyone's abilities," he said in an interview in his Senate office here.

"When I started running for governor, it was the same.

"Did you ever see that Harris poll I had done in June of 1958?

"It showed that 7 per cent of the people of Wisconsin knew who Gaylord Nelson was, and about 89 per cent knew who Gov. (Vernon) Thomson was.

"He had 50 per cent of the voters for him, and I had 30 per cent, and the other 20 per cent were 'undecided.'

"Lou Harris looked at me and said, 'Well, Gaylord, some races have been won from there.'

"I won it, with about 53 per cent of the vote in November."

"So any reputable, young, talented campaigner can be formidable, whether he is known in the state or not."

Laird's repeated statements that he will not be a candidate in Wisconsin next year clearly are welcomed by Nelson; he smiled when the names of the two most frequently mentioned Republican prospects — State Sen. Gerald Lorge of Bear Creek and Milo Knutson of LaCrosse were mentioned.

Both would have to be considered unfermidable foes, even under the Nelson dictum of taking no one for granted.

Similarly, former Gov. Warren P. Knowles has announced that he is through with elective politics, but sources at the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee say that they are hearing reports with increasing frequency that his younger brother, State Senate President Robert P. Knowles of New Richmond, is interested in a race against Nelson.

Nelson said he feels that the GOP as a party has not been damaged by the Watergate affair stemming from president Nixon's separate re-election organization last year.

Voters have clearly differentiated between the Nixon operation and the Republican Party, said Nelson.

"The public is sophisticated enough to know that it wasn't the operation of the party or of party regulars."

"It was a bunch of outsiders. As a party it hasn't damaged them," Nelson stressed.

And there are strong signs indicating that Nelson feels that if voters are going to react against the string of scandals coming to light, the reaction may be aimed at incumbents, generally, rather than solely at Republicans. Nelson's moves to limit contributions to his own campaign organization are viewed in that context.

Nor does Nelson think the relative unfamiliarity of the possible GOP opponents ultimately hurts the chances of the Republicans to unseat him as he did to Alexander Wiley a dozen years ago:

"We didn't have anything in the way of candidates when I ran for governor either," he said of his 1958 victory over incumbent Republican Thomson.

"I've had the experience of being at the bottom and going right to the top. If I can do it, anybody can."

Evidence of arson in fire at supper club

OSHKOSH — County detectives and a state fire marshal are investigating a blaze early Sunday that destroyed the Sarres Supper Club at 2605 Jackson Drive, on the city's north side.

The investigation was launched when firemen discovered evidence of a possible break-in and arson.

The chief fire officer in charge reported that there were two separate fires in the supper club. One started in the basement, the other on the main floor.

The major fire on the main floor began in an office and spread to the kitchen and bar areas. Heat was so intense that insulated windows in the barroom were cracked.

Firemen discovered further evidence that the fires might have been set. A back door that reportedly had been locked earlier was found open, and a basement door that was seldom used was found to have been forced open. Trim around the door was broken, and the door was scarred.

The fire was discovered shortly befor 1 a.m. by a man who arrived to clean the building. He went to the nearby home of the owner, Eva Sarres, who called the Oshkosh Fire Department. The town of Oshkosh department was called in later to assist.

Mrs. Sarres said she left the supper club at midnight, less than an hour before the fire was discovered, and everything was secure at that time.

contested matter would be handled in court, so an estate conceivably could bounce back and forth between the court and probate registrar.

Certain other legal matters, such as the appointment of a guardian for a minor beneficiary, must be handled in the court by Van Susteren.

The registrar and the probate court are located on the second floor of the courthouse. The probate forms can be purchased for do-it-yourself probate from the registrar.

Van Susteren said the new probate program would greatly increase the work burden of Schumaker. He said she would try operating without additional help to see if the load can be handled.

He said he would ask the county board to double Schmumaker's $8,700 salary because she still is going to be handling her only slightly decreased register in probate and other duties.

Wife held in knifing death at Oshkosh

OSHKOSH — A murder charge was expected to be filed today in Winnebago Court against the wife of a man who was stabbed to death at his home Sunday.

The victim was Charles F. Clemans, 41, 935 Nicolet Ave. He was the manager of the Howard Johnson Motor Lodge of Oshkosh. He was pronounced dead at 3:15 p.m. at Mercy Medical Center, where he was taken by ambulance after the 2:50 p.m. incident.

Cleman's wife, Susan, also 41, was taken into custody at the hospital, and was transported to the Winnebago County jail. She was expected to appear in court later today, after the charge is filed by Dist. Atty. William Carver. The court appearance will be before County Judge James V. Sitter.

Clemans was stabbed once in the back while he sat in the den of his home watching television. Police said it apparently followed a family argument, but they had no definite motive. Besides the fatal back wound, he had several slash wounds on one arm.

According to police, Clemans ran from the home after he was stabbed and collapsed in a neighbor's yard. Mrs. Clemans followed him from the house, holding the kitchen knife that is the suspected murder weapon, police said. The neighbor restrained Mrs. Clemans until police arrived.

of state aids to schools — enrollment gains or losses and operating budget increases. When the enrollment rises, the number of children being divided into the total district valuation increases, causing a smaller valuation per child and a larger gap between valuation and guaranteed valuation.

State aids generally have been increased as the local tax contribution increases, thus rewarding large local effort.

Some schools are experiencing enrollment increases, but not the large increases of the late 1960s. And Appleton has lost students during the past three years.

The matter of the anticipated financial problem was brought up at the Cooperative Educational Services Agency No. 8 administrators meeting last week by Appleton District Administrator Orlyn Zieman. Other Outagamie administrators expressed concern, and Mark Stone, Little Chute superintendent and chairman of the legislative committee for the CESA administrators group, was urged to start the ball rolling on remedial action.

It was suggested that the county's state legislators be contacted. Also, Stone said he believed a meeting of administrators from Outagamie schools should be called when Kingston could explain the problem to all.

Stone said he didn't fully understand the potential repercussions, but intended to study the matter.

The series of events won't affect municipalities and counties in the same detrimental way because their aids aren't based on the guaranteed valuation formula but on an escalating system — the more paid in in local taxes, the more received back in aid, commonly called shared taxes.

teaching job last Tuesday afternoon. Only a few pieces of jewelry were missing from a bedroom, police said.

Later Tuesday Mrs. Barnard reported her husband missing. He had told her Tuesday morning he would hitchhike to classes in nearby South Bend. The Barnards are Green Bay natives.

Postal workers at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago Tuesday night reportedly found a note, apparently written by Barnard, telling of an abduction.

Barnard's mother had told The Post Crescent last Wednesday that early indications were her son had been abducted by "an escapee."

Mishawaka police today said that there had been two escapees from the South Bend jail, but both were captured and were not involved in the Barnard case.

Chicago police found Barnard's rented car at O'Hare Tuesday night. Mishawaka police confirmed a report that Barnard was alone when he rented the auto in South Bend Tuesday.

It is still unclear how Barnard was located Friday near Phoenix.

A Barnard family spokesman had said Barnard's captor forced him to fly to Phoenix Tuesday night. He said Barnard escaped in a mountainous region north of Phoenix and spent about 40 hours in the mountains before being found by authorities in a park.

He was given a medical checkup at a Phoenix hospital and then was released to his parents.

Earlier indications had been that Barnard was being taken to Colorado Springs, Colo., on a 6 p.m. Tuesday Continental Airlines flight from O'Hare. Police also had reported that he used his credit card to pay for the car rental and two airline tickets.

Mishawaka police today said they had no reason to believe ransom was sought. Barnard is the son of a Green Bay Realtor, Michael J. Barnard, and his wife is the daughter of William Payant, vice president of a Green Bay securities firm.

In a prepared statement, a Barnard family spokesman said Barnard was "abducted under a continuing threat to his wife."

Barnard's mother told a reporter last Wednesday that her daughter-in-law had been threatened and was in protective custody.

Mishawaka police said they knew nothing about the threats nor did they have Mrs. Barnard in protective custody at any time.

The family spokesman related, in the prepared statement, that Barnard "...was able to write a note on a paper towel in a rest room (at O'Hare) warning of the threat. Those portions of the note relating to the danger to his wife have not been released by the FBI and no further comments on the threats can be made at this time."

The spokesman said the abductor was not known to either the Barnard or Payant families.

Hunting and fishing fees

Summer has idled away but the controversy over the increasing of fishing and hunting license fees remains.

Less than two months ago the legislature approved the 1973-75 state budget and with it authorized substantial fee increases for resident and non-resident hunting and fishing licenses. The non-resident costs were doubled. There was an immediate cry of protest from resort owners and others related to the recreation industry. They claimed that their business was suffering and that non-resident tourists who provide a major portion of the trade were either refusing to keep reservations or promising never to come again.

Opponents to the fee increases cited two major complaints. First, they condemned the increases as being too high and began applying pressure to have them lowered. Secondly, they reacted with shock to the provision of the law that made the fee increases effective the minute Gov. Patrick Lucey signed the budget bill since it forced them to change rates in the middle of the summer tourist season.

Supporters of the fee increases also have two arguments. First, they point out, non-resident tourists make wide use of the state's recreational areas and should be expected to pay a greater cost of the upkeep to help defray expenses which they create by coming to Wisconsin, using our resources and leaving traces of the visit behind.

Secondly, they point out that Illinois tourists (who make up the major portion of non-residents visiting the state) are allowed to travel throughout Wisconsin free of charge while Wisconsinites traveling South often are assessed highway tolls.

No one can deny that the recreation industry is one of the state's most important, bringing in $2 billion annually. But at the same time, anyone who has enjoyed the pleasures of Door County or any other Wisconsin vacationland has at least one time or another wished privately that all those other people would go away.

Naturally the resort owners are displeased with the increases. If just one Illinois family cancels its vacation plans, it means a loss in revenue. But is it really conceivable that tourists will come all the way and pay the always-rising resort costs, and then suddenly balk at a $12.50 fishing license fee? Is it really conceivable that the recreation industry will be in jeopardy if the fees are not lowered?

Whatever the arguments, this is one issue that will be decided by public opinion. Lucey signed the bill authorizing the increases but has stated that he would support a reduction since his original fee proposal was at a slightly lower level. A bill is now before the legislature to have the fees lowered and to offer non-residents a compromise 10-day license. Legislators, recognizing a volatile issue that could be a key campaign issue with election time nearing, are listening.

It makes sense to accept the fee increases. If there is a slight loss in out-of-state traffic, very few citizens of Wisconsin will care.

The bloodlust of a mob

Who lives in Dania, Fla? The city probably is composed of persons much like those on most main streets. If so a recent incident in Dania should cause concern throughout the nation.

It was in Dania recently that a crowd of 300 threw rocks and jeered as police saved the life of a desperate 27-year-old woman who was threatening to jump to her death from a 110-foot tower.

That mob wanted the young woman to jump.

Days earlier another mob, possibly consisting of some of the same persons, had threatened firemen who "talked down" a man threatening suicide on the same tower.

It is disturbing when, through apathy, a crowd stands aside and permits a suicide to occur but through theories of "group irresponsibility," it may to some extent be understood.

But the bloodlust of mobs such as those that yelled for human sacrifices in Dania are truly frightening.

The cynic might ask how individual members of that mob behave in other circumstances and bitterly remark about hypocritical behavior of "good citizens." But somehow that view is not enough.

It is better to look closely at those "normal" people of Dania. They have failed and it is imperative that we know why. We might check their tensions and frustrations, hopes and aspirations. That mob in Dania was an alarm, a symptom of a community failure, and that failure may well not be confined to Dania.

Uncomfortable as it may seem it is likely that the citizens of Dania are very like the people in every city.

Other victims of the war

There's another group of casualties of the Vietnam war. Strangely enough these suffer in a way because of kindness.

In the 1960's the Committee of Responsibility was formed by some Americans concerned about what we were doing in Indochina. It arranged for the care of badly wounded and mutilated Vietnamese children. About a hundred youngsters with severe napalm burns or paralyzed limbs were brought to the United States for treatment.

The children were given the best medical care available and lived with American families during recuperation periods. But then they were sent back to their families in Vietnam. The result has been tragic.

William Cooper, a physical therapist who directs the much larger rehabilitation and care program within Vietnam, explains that "the kids would live with affluent American families and be the pet of the house. They came back spoiled. You can tell the difference. . .the kids from the States talk back, make smart remarks. They are not polite children. They have no manners. They don't listen. They make trouble in the house. they want money all the time." They've developed an unhealthy dependence upon Americans. Cooper feels. writing them for help and often they "see no hope for their lives unless Americans are around."

Others have come back to families decimated by the war or who are extremely poor. American families still write. "They keep encouraging him to go to school and become a doctor. They say maybe when he gets out of high school he can come to America and be a doctor. He is bright but he has only a third-grade education. What is he supposed to do, start in the fourth grade at age 18?" The paraplegics are told by their American families that they can overcome their handicaps; their Vietnam parents tell them they are doomed to helplessness. The conflict is disastrous.

Taking on a war means a great deal more than defeating the enemy. The cultural dislocation for the Vietnamese children is shattering.

Wisconsin report

Legislative fiscal bureau does analysis

BY DALE CATTANACH

MADISON — To those who observe and study state legislatures, one of the more obvious changes during the past decade has been the sharp increase in the number of legislative staff and staff services. To illustrate, in July of 1973, there were approximately 438 persons on the Wisconsin legislative payroll, excluding legislators themselves. Ten years ago the number was approximately 152.

There are a number of reasons for the increase. Years ago, the legislator's job was distinctly part time and a "do-it-yourself" effort. That situation has changed and continues to change. Principal cause include the expenditure explosion of the 1960s, a sharp increase in the number and complexity of problems confronting governments at all levels, and a slowly growing realization that the legislative branch should be in fact co-equal with the executive branch of the government.

Lack enough information

In recent years, despite growth in staff services, there has been widespread agreement that too little policy analysis is provided to too few legislators. Although it may be argued that more than a modest amount of information is already available for the asking or taking, many rank and file legislators understandably and perhaps justifiably complain that they are not sufficiently informed to evaluate the executive budget proposal and to make wise and proper decisions on the vast number of items included in the budget, the most comprehensive bill of the legislative session.

As a consequence, the governor and state agencies continue to dominate decisions concerning the administration and operation of state government.

The Legislative Fiscal Bureau is by law directed to perform fiscal and program analysis for the legislature and its committees. In carrying out this mandate, it reviews existing and proposed programs, evaluates plans and policies related to departmental requests for appropriations, and presents alternatives to the governor's recommended budget and proposals.

Dale Cattanach, one of the key officers of the Wisconsin Legislature is chief of its Bureau of Fiscal Research, is a specialist in public finance. He is guest columnist today for John Wyngaard, on vacation.

Although policy analysis is done by the caucus staffs and assistants to legislators, the primary staff work in this area is done by the Legislative Fiscal Bureau and the Legislative Council.

In Wisconsin and in other states, additional legislative policy staff, using new budgeting techniques (such as "zero base budgeting" and "performance auditing"), has been advocated as the solution to the biennial budget battle and the primary way in which the legislature may reassert its constitutional "power of the purse." However, the opinion offered here is that larger staffs and new techniques are not the sole answer, although each may be desirable and perhaps even necessary.

Independent, equal status

Significant change in the method of legislative operations in general and the budget process in particular will require difficult decisions on the part of individual legislators and the legislature as a body. There must, for instance, be a collective, though not necessarily articulated, decision that the legislature insist upon the independent and equal status that is its constitutional obligation. The strains that will surface from such a declaration of independence are readily apparent.

Providing more and better information to every legislator may cost several hundred thousand dollars to add not only the necessary legislative staff but to supplement the state operating departments' appropriations for personnel and equipment to collect and publish data and statistics.

Whatever the staff and other resources available, they are no substitute for hard political and programmatic decisions. Without the willingness of the legislature to use its staff wisely and to make hard decisions, there is danger that staff may be no more useful than costume jewelry — not worth much, but nice to wear and look at.

Few presidents have mandate

I'd like to discuss the little word "mandate" today, in its current political sense. And I want to do so in a wholly non-partisan manner, so that we may examine the word in its fullest setting.

In my time, there have been only two Presidents who were given a "mandate" by the electorate—they were Franklin Roosevelt and General Eisenhower.

The people who voted for FDR voted for him, and not against his opponents; he could have won against anybody. Likewise, Eisenhower was elected and reelected because the voters preferred him, not because they were repulsed by Mr. Stevenson.

In every other Presidential election in my time, the people have voted against somebody, rather than for him. They voted against Tom Dewey more than for Harry Truman; against Barry Goldwater more than for Lyndon Johnson; and, overwhelmingly, against George McGovern more than for Richard Nixon.

(Both the Kennedy-Nixon and Humphrey-Nixon elections were so close that the word "mandate" was never thought of, much less mentioned by the victors.)

The mistake made by Lyndon Johnson—and the one that led to his arrogance and ultimate downfall—was the assumption that people were voting "for" him instead of against Barry Goldwater. He was tragically wrong in that respect.

And, in 1972, the even more tragic mistake made by Nixon and his loyalists was the assumption that his crushing victory over McGovern was a "mandate," when in reality it was simply a choice of what most voters thought was a lesser evil.

This "mandate" delusion is a dangerous frame of mind. It did not lead to the Watergate mentality, but it seemed to justify it. After 1972, the Prussian Guard around Nixon was more arrogant and authoritarian than before. I suggest a simple way to avoid this in the future; so simple that it will not be adopted. On the Presidential ballot, there should be four choices, and not two. The first two would be "For Nixon" or "For McGovern." The following two would be "Against Nixon" or "Against McGovern." Naturally, any "against" vote would be tallied up for the opponent. But this device would enable a new President to see clearly where he stood, and to realize that what may seem to be a "mandate" is merely the reluctant choice of a lesser evil. This would shrink heads in the White House, and perhaps prevent the tragedy of a Johnson or a Nixon.

Kissinger's debut at U.N. fruitful

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—The primacy of domestic politics was just illustrated by nothing so much as Henry Kissinger's debut as Secretary of State here in the United Nations. Even in private negotiations every move the Secretary made was dominated by the American scene. What emerged was the prospect of a diplomacy very remote from the acrobatics which have characterized Dr. Kissinger's past record.

Consider, first, the one area of business handled by Dr. Kissinger here this week where spectacular possibilities do exist—the Arab-Israeli dispute in the Near East. At a luncheon with a group of Arab diplomats, the Secretary of State made it clear that the United States would not impose any outside scheme on Israel. But he added that Washington "understands your point of view."

The implication was that, while the United States would not act in the matter openly, a lot might be done privately. If it was a matter of secret meetings, Dr. Kissinger probably could arrange some rooms in, say, Malta. Once negotiations between the Arabs and Israel were engaged, he seemed to be hinting, he would be prepared to press the Israelis hard for accommodation.

Insofar as there is any chance for Dr. Kissinger to duplicate his past diplomatic coups, that approach in the Near East might be fruitful. But his great reputation has already tilted the odds against him.

The Arab diplomats here seem to have convinced themselves that since Dr. Kissinger is a Jew, not subject to Zionist pressures, he will be able, unlike other American diplomats, to pin back Israel's ears. Rumors are current among Arab diplomats that Dr. Kissinger has already worked out a new approach.

The rumors are false. But they signify that the renown of the new Secretary of State as a puller of rabbits from diplomatic hats has excited expectations which cannot be realized. So even in the one area where a great success is possible, it seems unlikely.

Even more important than the Near East was the matter of dealing with the Soviet Union. Dr. Kissinger met privately with Soviet foreign minister Andrei Gromyko to review the state of Big Two relations. They confirmed opportunities for moving ahead in arms control and increased trade.

But congressional opinion regarding the recent Soviet crackdown on civil liberties is so strong that Dr. Kissinger was not able to operate as though it didn't exist. He pointed out to the Soviet diplomat that the administration's proposal to give Russia most-favored nation treaty status as part of its trade bill was in deep trouble. He told Mr. Gromyko that the Jackson amendment, requiring Soviet progress in freeing up emigration and civil liberties as a price for economic concessions, was supported by a broad coalition of forces—not, as the Russians sometimes like to believe, just a handful of Zionist lobbyists.

Mr. Gromyko was not able to ignore the issue. In his formal speech Tuesday he made a sharp reference to those who "arrogate the right to instruct others as to who should resolve matters of emigration from this or that country." Thus the issue of detente and civil liberties has been brought out into the open. It will have to be dealt with squarely, not swept under the rug as in the past few years.

Differences between the United States and its leading allies also surfaced in Secretary Kissinger's talks here. In a speech last April, Dr. Kissinger invited the Europeans to prepare a joint declaration of principles—a "new Atlantic charter"—as a prelude to a European trip by President Nixon.

But last week a draft prepared by the Europeans surfaced here in New York. It was generally vague and Dr. Kissinger made it plain that the present version of the draft would be inadequate as a basis for a presidential trip.

Efforts to strengthen the draft, notably with West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, are now underway. But the administration's domestic troubles are well-known to the Europeans. The general feeling here is that Mr. Nixon can have his European trip if he wants it, but that it cannot possibly be a brilliant triumph.

What all this suggests to me is that the era of striking new departures in American diplomacy is over. For all his conceptual brilliance and technical skill, even Dr. Kissinger can no longer negate the limitations of domestic difficulties for the United States. Washington will have to enter upon a less active diplomacy—which is probably all for the best.

New bell suggested for church

100 YEARS AGO
Appleton Crescent, Sept. 20, 1873.

Some time ago we intended broaching the subject of a new bell for the Methodist Church, now in process of erection, but by some means the question has been overlooked until now, therefore, the circumstances demand immediate action. Another section is to be added to the bell tower, before it is to be surmounted by the wooden spire, in the design.

If a large bell is secured, it should be placed in the tower before the brickwork is completed, for obvious reasons. It has been suggested the citizens of Appleton should generally aid in securing a large bell to correspond with the edifice in which it is to be placed.

We think the suggestion very proper. If we mistake not, every bell that has been placed in our churches has been contributed for by our citizens, regardless of religious preference.

The new Methodist Church, when completed, will be an honor to our city and a credit to that society. Ten or 20 of our most prominent citizens, outside that organization, could well afford to contribute $1,000 to $1,200 to buy a handsome bell to place in that new church. We throw out these hints for someone to enlarge upon and give them immediate and practical shape.

How to speculate in commodities

Never before in our nation's history have so many professional and amateur speculators, big and small, been trading in this country's commodities markets. Never before has the trading been so frantic, the promise so alluring. And never before have so many presumably made so much money—and presumably lost so much money—on initially tiny stakes.

The reasons for the powerful boom are easy to spot:

Prices of both agricultural and industrial raw commodities have become front-page news as they have been spurred upward by global demands, global inflations and global population growth.

The spectacular price swings—down as well as up—have attracted tens of thousands of individual speculators seeking big profits from small investments as well as tens of thousands of business firms buying commodities futures to protect themselves against the price fluctuations. In general, this is a wildly speculative era and 1973 in particular has been a super-speculative year.

As the stock market has become a disaster area, once active stock traders (gamblers, amateurs, dabblers) have turned to the commodities markets. And there is no doubting that these markets do offer what Stanley Kroll, a professional commodities trader and president of the New York firm of Kroll, Dalon & Co., calls a "unique money making potential."

Finally, almost uncontrolled forces of supply and demand are at work in the world today which practically assure a continuation of wide gyrations in prices of most commodities—the fundamental which beckons to the gambler.

Commodities trading is a world unto itself. You must study with utmost care the background of each commodity, learn the complexities of trading, become familiar with the mechanics of specific trades. And then on top of all this, you must have a special type of personality—cold, unemotional, detached—if you are to trade successfully over the long-term in this area.

But let's say that you are undaunted by all the pitfalls you face in speculating in commodities. What intrigues you is the knowledge that people have been making huge profits on small stakes. Here are six basic rules to enhance your chances of success:

(1) Limit your investment to three or four commodities. As Kroll puts it in the privately circulated "P-H Management Letter," don't even try "to be a jack of all trades. Master just a few." Make a list of several commodities whose prices you believe are likely to change substantially and whose movements you would like to follow. Find out everything you can about these—via research from reputable brokerage houses, reports from the U.S. Agriculture Dept., the major commodities exchanges. Keep abreast of all basic forces affecting the prices of each commodity—the weather, crop forecasts, inflation, government subsidies and policies, currency changes. Also study the specifics on each—wheat, frozen orange juice, silver, beef, etc.

(2) Go for only the major moves in each commodity. "Don't try to sell or buy based on the day-to-day rallies and dips," cautions Kroll. The daily price changes are not so severe because there are usually limits set by each exchange on the amount of change per day. But if you are whipsawed by a price change of just a few pennies, you can lose a substantial amount of money on your contract.

(3) Take your losses and let your profits run. This is about the only way to make a long-range profit in commodities. The typical savvy speculator achieves success with profitable trades in only one-third of his transactions.

(4) Start with at least $10,000 in "pure risk" capital and be sure this is money you can afford to lose. A key reason why so many small-time commodities traders lose their shirts is that they do not start out with enough capital. (It's estimated that, of all speculators in commodities, an estimated 85 per cent are losers and only 15 per cent are winners over a long span.)

(5) Don't commit more than one-third of your total capital in one commodity. "This way," says Kroll, "if one market position starts to slip, all is not lost."

(6) Don't meet margin calls—liquidate instead. If a margin call becomes necessary, the odds are your timing or market judgment are off. Your best bet is to get out early when your loss is limited. Also, don't dollar average in an effort to "average down" the cost of your investment position. Averaging may work over the long run in the stock market but it seldom works in commodities.

Democrats reforming convention

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) — A Democratic party committee revising the controversial 1972 delegate-selection reforms is considering a compromise on how to guarantee a voice for minority viewpoints.

That question, the result of a vote by the 1972 convention requiring a proportional representation in 1976, was the first major area of controversy to come before the 17-member drafting committee meeting in this Washington suburb.

The drafting committee hopes to draw up broadly acceptable proposals at meetings this weekend and next for presentation Oct. 27 to the full delegate selection commission.

Unless it succeeds in doing this, the result could be a nasty party fight, and possibly one or more lawsuits that could reopen many of the 1972 party wounds.

On the proportional representation question, the commission is considering a requirement that could be imposed down to the congressional district level, a proposal offered by President Joseph A. Beirne of the Communications Workers of America. More general language was suggested by Lt. Gov. Blair Lee of Maryland.

A compromise proposed by Gov. John J. Gilligan of Ohio would accept the Beirne proposal but would require that the candidate would have to get 15 per cent of the vote to qualify for any delegates at a given stage in the process.

That would answer the fears of party leaders who believe that a strict application of the proportional representation principle would increase the strength of minority candidates and make it more difficult to agree on a nominee.

In its major decisions on Friday, all of which are subject to review once formal language is drafted, the committee restored limited use of proxies, added a provision under which presidential candidates would have some control over those seeking to be their delegates and agreed to keep most of the 1972 rules that provided open meetings and clearly defined procedures.

Under the chairmanship of Baltimore Councilwoman Barbara Mikulski, who also heads the full commission, the meeting stayed low-key and friendly despite obvious differences among some of the committee members.

Soviet supersonic bombers sent to Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has sent supersonic bombers to Iraq for the first time in a move Pentagon officials believe could affect the power balance in the oil-rich Persian Gulf area

Most Pentagon analysts predict the Russians will turn over a small number of TU22 blinder bombers to the Irahis, although there is some opinion that the Soviets flew there on an exercise

The Blinder, which can fly missions at about 1,000 miles an hour, is twice as fast and far more advanced than bombers the Russians previously gave any Arab air force

Until now, the Soviets have concentrated on fighter planes for the Arabs

Israelis probably will be worried about this new bomber development, but U.S. authorities appear to be focusing their concern on the Persian Gulf implications because of the energy crisis

The first indication that the Russians had made the recent move came in a talk by Deputy Secretary of Defense William P Clements last Friday, during hich he stressed the importance of the Persian Gulf's vast oil reserves

Clements told a small group of civic leaders that the Russians had "put He did not identify the planes, nor elaborate. Other Pentagon officials supplied details.

Some officials suggested the Russians might be using the bomber move as a go-slow signal to Iran, which is spending billions of dollars on modern arms bought principally from the United States and Britain

Iran, a long-time U S. ally, and Iraq, a Soviet client, have been rivals for a long time. That rivalry has taken on new importance in the broader western-Communist maneuvering for influence in the Persian Gulf-Indian Ocean region since Britain pulled out its forces a few years ago

This would not be the first Russian action that could be interpreted as a warning to Iran.

American intelligence sources have reported at least 20 flights by very fast Soviet MIG25 Foxbat reconnaissance planes over Iranian territory this year.

Ironically, the overflights may have increased Iran's interest in buying even more sophisticated planes, such as the advanced F14 and F15 fighters being developed by the U.S. Navy and Air Force.

And the appearance of supersonic bombers in Iraq may serve to push the Shah of Iran even closer to buying the costly fighters, officials say

Ex-convict being sought in kidnaping

DURAND, Wis (AP) — An ex-convict was named in a kidnap warrant Sunday concerning the abduction of a Pepin County deputy sheriff.

Authorities throughout the state were seeking James R Brant, 29, a former resident of Buffalo County

Sheriff Roger Britton of Pepin County said Deputy Sheriff William E Mountin was forced at gunpoint Saturday night to drive to Dodge County in central Wisconsin where another motorist, Mark Malak, 19, of Beaver Dam, was forced with Mountin to drive to West Bend in eastern Wisconsin

Mountin, his patrol car having been abandoned in a corn field, and Malak were freed unharmed, author ties said.

The abductor vanished with Malak's car, carrying two pistols including Mountin's service revolver.

Britton said Mountin had been abducted while investigating a car found wrecked beside a Pepin County road.

He said it had been reported stolen in Milwaukee, and was thought to have been the car in which two hitchhikers were forced at gunpoint to accompany an abductor on a tavern-hopping spree into Minnesota

Soviets expect good harvest

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Agriculture Department is predicting a record grain harvest in the Soviet Union this year despite heavy rains that caused crop damage in some areas

The department estimated the Soviet Union's gross grain crop at 195 million metric tons, which would exceed the previous record of 186 8 million in 1970.

The report, published in this week's issue of "Foreign Agriculture" magazine, released Sunday, said the crop — including wheat, rye, oats, barley and corn — would come close to the level planned by Russia of 197.4 million tons.

Heavy rains have produced some crop losses and reduction in grain quality in the European area of the oviet Union. Also, the report said, excessive rain in the Siberia-Kazakhstan regions last month occurred while "significant amounts of unharvested grain" remained in the fields.

The report said the Ikraine — Russia's breadbasket — has reportedly produced 45 million tons of grain this year, well above the 40 million set by the government as the 1973 goal.

Six bodies found at crash site

FLORENCE, Wis. (AP) —Bodies of six Michigan victims were found by persistent searchers Sunday in the wreckage of a private airplane which crashed Sept. 21 during a rain storm

"The wreck was concealed from search airplanes by dense woods, and might never have been found if it hadn't been for the volunteer foot patrols who refused to quit," Sheriff Jake Neuens said.

Forested areas along the Wisconsin-Upper Michigan border near Florence and Crystal Falls, Mich., had been combed since the disappearance of the twin-engine airplane on a flight from Michigan's Lower Peninsula.

The sheriff said he was convinced the plane could be found in northern Florence County because a motorist, the last person known to have seen the plane, had spotted it at treetop level east of Florence about the time it vanished.

The plane's occupants were from Highland in Oakland County, Mich.

They were pilot Joseph Neu, 57; his wife; their daughter, Dorothy; her husband, Jim Parks; and two Parks children, agged 9 and 2.

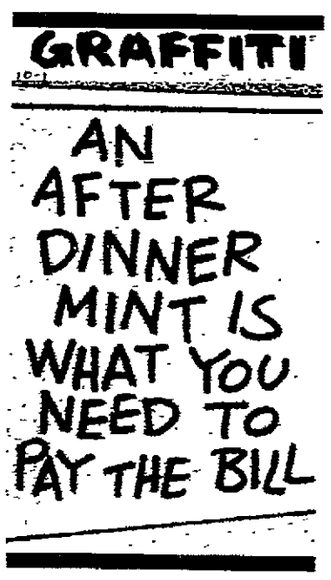
The wreckage was discovered by a search party of approximately 30 volunteers and law enforcement officials, the sheriff said, calling the group "a determined bunch of guys who would not quit."

He estimated his county had contributed 250 volunteers for earlier stages of an interstate, multicounty search

He said the wreckage was in a generally level, heavily wooded, virtually roadless area.

The pilot had radioed for advice in landing at Iron County Airport near Crystal Falls, Mich., north of Florence, but had given no indication of distress, the sheriff said.

The Neu plane had been expected to arrive the evening of Sept 21 at the airport, where friends from Stambaugh, Mich., were waiting.



Searchers find plane in Arkansas

MENA, Ark. (AP) — The wreckage of an airliner missing since last Thursday was found Sunday night on a southwest Arkansas mountainside nearly 100 miles off the course of a 75-mile flight.

Eight unidentified bodies were recovered Sunday night from the wreckage of the Texas International Convair turboprop. No survivors were found from the plane which carried eight passengers and a crew of three on its scheduled flight from El Dorado, Ark , to nearby Texarkana, Ark.

Darkness and terrain too rugged for helicopters to land hampered search efforts. The area was sealed off, and search efforts were suspended until daybreak, with three persons still unaccounted for.

The area in which the plane crashed has been described as dangerous for aircraft. Mountains rise suddenly out of 1,000-foot hills to a height of 2,800 feet.

The wreckage was spotted by a student pilot shortly before dusk on North Fork Mountain, which is about 14 miles northwest of Mena.

Edward Dreifus of the National Transportation Safety Board said the bodies recovered by paramedics who were lowered to the crash site could not be immediately identified Three of those aboard were colonels assigned to the Red River Army Depot at Texarkana, Tex

For three days the search for the missing plane had centered in south Arkansas along the 75-mile line the scheduled flight was to have taken. Airline spokesman Jim O'Donnell had no comment when asked why the plane had gone 100 miles off course, but authorities had earlier speculated it might have done so to avoid a storm

Forrest Ogden, a newsman who flew over the crash site before rescue units arrived, said he saw no signs of life He said the airliner had crashed into the east edge of Black Fork Mountain, a peak of about 2,500 feet, knocking down several trees. "This terrain is extremely rough," Ogden said. "The tree cover is extremely thick "'

Ogden said the search had moved into the Mena area only after a truck driver read about the plane crash and reported that he had seen a fire on Black Fork Mountain Thursday night

The Convair left El Dorado at 8:20 p m. Thursday night on a 20-minute flight to Texarkana Between the two Arkansas cities it encountered a violent thunderstorm. The plane was reported missing by the airline shortly before midnight, about an hour after it would have exhausted its fuel supply.

More than 400 persons and 50 aircraft participated in a ground and air search in south Arkansas through the weekend.

A broad belt of rain and showers is predicted Monday for most of the East, with the exception of New England and northern New York. Showers are expected in the Rockies. Warm weather is forecast for the East and Midwest while cooler temperatures will prevail in the Rockies and northern Plains states. (AP Wirephoto Map)

Mild temperatures predicted

October sneaked into Appleton under a cover of clouds today but carried a promise of a few mild days into the area.

The U.S. Weather Service predicted variable cloudiness tonight with a low in the lower 50s. Tuesday will be partly cloudy and warm with a high in the low 70s.

Light and variable winds tonight will become southerly from 7 to 15 miles per hour Thursday. Wednesday will be fair and warmer with a high in the mid 70s.

Winds do not deter Tanaka from finishing his appointed round

LONDON (AP) —Gale winds gusting to 40 miles an hour couldn't keep Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka off the golf course on the first day of a five-day visit to England.

Tanaka and William Whitelaw, the British government minister in charge of Northern Ireland affairs, played Sunday at the Royal St. George course on southeast England's North Sea coast.

MRT season opens with drama

MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Repertory Theater Company will inaugurate its 20th anniversary season at 8 p.m. Friday with the opening of "Prisoner of the Crown," by Richard F. Stockton and Richard T. Herd.

The intriguing and bizarrely nightmarish drama will play for 50 performances in the Todd Wehr Theater of the Performing Arts Center before closing its run on Nov. 17.

In 1916, Sir Roger Casement was tried and executed for treason by the British court. That is a historical fact. However, the events which may have led to that incident, the questionable occurrences following its completion, and the ludicrous quagmire of human fear, suspicion, patriotism, ambition and intolerance which form the trial itself are the subject matter of "Prisoner of the Crown."

History, unfortunately, is never really recorded save in the minds of individuals. And, upon those uncertain journals whirls the fate of Roger Casement. "Prisoner of the Crown," then, becomes a play not so much of fact as of facts seen through the eyes of humans. Twelve jurors become the characters in the Casement story. From the jury room at the Old Bailey, the audience is instantly transported to the coast of Ireland, or the chambers of Parliament, or the yard of a German prisoner-of-war camp where Casement tries to enlist Irishmen into a brigade to fight England for Irish independence.

The infamous "Black Diaries" of Roger Casement, which detailed his homosexual activities, played an enormous and devastating role in his destruction. Their revelation produces an equally frightening effect on the jurors. The trial does not end when the verdict is announced.

"Prisoner of the Crown," which is subtitled "The Royal Rape of Ruari MacAsmunde" (Ruari MacAsmunde being Gaelic for Roger Casement), was first presented at the Abbey Theater in Dublin three years ago. MRT's production of the play, only the third time it has been produced, will be directed by Artistic Director Nagle Jackson.

Appearing in the lead role of the Casement Juror will be Robert Lanchester. Robert Jorge portrays the juror who acts as Smith, the prosecuting attorney, while Durward McDonald plays the Sullivan Juror, defense attorney. David O. Petersen will be seen as the juror who plays Reading, the judge. Each of the twelve jurors plays various roles in the depiction of events from the Casement saga. The other Jurors will be portrayed by: William McKereghan, Montgomery Davis, Robert Dawson, Jim Baker, Robert Ground, Richard Risso, Jack Swanson and Michael Pierce. Ray Johnston will appear as the Custodian.

Sets and lighting for this adventure between reality and illusion have been designed by Christopher M. Idoine. James Edmund Brady has designed the costumes and Merry Tigar is production stage manager.

Ron Moody in 'Gunsmoke'

7-8 —Channels 2-7 —Gunsmoke has a great performance from Ron Moody in a touching but hardly new story. He's the town drunk who meets and becomes friendly with a young boy (Vincent Van Patten) whose father hasn't really taken the time to understand him. Their relationship is the essence of this tale, which also deals with a land-hungry man who uses Moody to get a parcel of land.

7-8 —Channels 9-11 —The Rookies are working the juvenile division, which means there is one main story and two sub-plots. Scott Jacoby, who beat another boy stealing his bike, is the focal character.

7-9:30 —Channel 38 —Juvenile Court examines several cases of juvenile offenders brought before the judge's bench. The documentary by Frederick Wiseman was filmed in Memphis, Tenn. Its drama is not in the presentation, which is slow-paced and noncommittal, but in the bewilderment, often tearful, of the youngsters who find themselves answerable to rules of conduct formed by adults.

7:30-8 — Channel 5 — Diana has a slightly better script although there are still a few more contrivances than necessary. Anyway, Diana Rigg is on the receiving end of a series of telephone calls from a heavy breather, which brings an inept police sergeant into her life. There also is the matter of a coffin delivered to her apartment in lieu of a piano she ordered.

8-8:30 — Channels 2-7 — Lucille Ball turns very elegant on Here's Lucy. Kim (Lucie Arnaz) and Harry (Gale Gordon) get to play two other characters each as Lucy pretends to be very rich and jet-setty to impress Ed McMahon, who is one of those very sincere bank vice-presidents, ever so eager to grant loans to some people. Lucy wants money from him for Harry.

8-Conclusion — Channels 9-11 —NFL Monday Night Football finds the Atlanta Falcons in the lair of the Detroit Lions in Tiger Stadium, Detroit. The talky threesome of Howard Cosell, Don Meredith and Frank Gifford hold forth.

9-10 —Channels 2-7 —A young woman needs heart surgery on Medical Center but she won't make the decision because she has a hang up. Her woman psychiatrist has trouble finding out the problem. It's allied to the psychiatrist's own adult problem. Lois Nettleton and Jamie Smith Jackson are good as psychiatrist and patient, so this holds some interest for series fans.

8:30-9 —Channels 2-7 —The New Dick Van Dyke Show is more slapstick than usual, with a flashback look at a trip Dick and Jenny (Hope Lange) made to Germany, as part of a prize they won. There is a major mix-up over their hotel reservations, a major language barrier and an illicit romance mixed up in this.

Good Griff!

Good "Griff"!

As somebody once wrote, another detective story. This time it's Lorne Greene as an L.A. private eye named Wade Griffin. There's an innovative twist in "Griff" (9-10 p.m. Saturdays, Channel 11); he used to be a policeman. Don't you see how with that background he has to know a lot of criminal types? Like in the first episode he know this real cool coke dealer and it turned out he was guilty, too (thus effectively removing the one potentially interesting character, had he been allowed to recur).

Griff's young, attractive partner, Mike Murdock (Ben Murphy), has a part so unimaginatively written he is little more than a pretty face and a pair of flying fists. The opening show was totally ordinary and relied on all the usual sort of action.

Why watch this show at all? Frankly, there is not much reason. True, Lorne Greene is a fine actor, but it has never been my belief that he can transcend inherently bad scripts.

Would you believe that I saw less than half a dozen "Bonanza" episodes in all its many years on the tube? Here he can mainly display his ability to be workmanly and businesslike in the face of mediocrity.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED ABANDONMENT PURSUANT TO 49 CFR 1121

Notice is hereby given that the Interstate Commerce Commission is being requested to issue a certificate of public convenience and necessity permitting abandonment of the line of railroad of the Chicago and North Western Transportation Company extending from railroad milepost 0.2 near Hortonville, Outagamie County, Wisconsin in a southerly direction to railroad milepost 10.3 near Larsen, Winnebago County, Wisconsin, a distance of 10.1 miles, all in Outagamie and Winnebago Counties, Wisconsin. This line includes the stations of Medina Junction, Medina and Larsen, Wisconsin.

The interest of employees will be protected by the "Burlington Condition," as described in 357 ICC 700.

The reasons for this proposed abandonment are that traffic over the above-described line is extremely low, averaging only 16.4 carloads per mile for the twelve-month period September, 1972 through August, 1973, inclusive; and operating expenses have increased and are increasing to the extent that operation of the line will be unprofitable in the future. Continuation of operation of the line will be an undue burden on interstate commerce, and would deprive applicant and shippers on its lines of other places of the use of salvageable material from the line; particularly the usable 100 pound rail with which most of the line is laid. Estimated total net salvage value of the line is $121,000. Granting the authority sought in this application will not constitute a major Federal Action having a significant effect upon the quality of the human environment.

The name and address of applicant's representative to whom inquiries may be made is: Christopher A. Mills, Commerce Attorney, Chicago and North Western Transportation Company, 400 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois 60606.

The Interstate Commerce Commission will rule on this application without hearings unless protests are received which contain information indicating a need for such hearings. In accordance with the Commission's regulations (49 CFR 1100.250) in Ex Parte No. 55(Sub No. 4), Implementation of National Environmental Policy Act, 1969, 340 ICC 431 (1972), any protests may include a statement indicating the presence or absence of any effect of the requested Commission action on the quality of the human environment. If any such effect is alleged to be present, the statement shall include information relating to the relevant factors set forth in Ex Parte No. 55 (Sub No. 4) supra, Part (B) (1)-(5), 340 ICC 431, 461.

Any protest referring to this notice, No. AB-1 (Sub No. 21) shall be filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, D.C. 20423, not later than November 15, 1973.

Public hearing set on water rate hike

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The Public Service Commission of Wisconsin scheduled a public hearing here Tuesday to investigate an application of the City of Waupaca for authority to increase water rates.

The City of Waupaca filed the application Sept. 5, requesting that a surcharge be added to its present rates yielding $90,000 additional annual income. In August, the city sold $1.3 million waterworks mortgage revenue bond anticipation notes at an annual interest rate of 6.75 per cent.

Proceeds of the note sale are being used to finance expansion of the city's water storage and distribution system in compliance with plans previously approved by the commission. The surcharge is being requested to meet interest costs during construction.
